MELLON'S TAX PLANS AROUSE IRE OF CRITICS

Borah, Couzens and Hull Rush to Attack on Radio Speech.

POLITICS HELD ONLY INCREASE PREVENTION

Extending Income Levy Held Same in Principle as Lowering Wages.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon's discussion of Federal tax remedies drew fire yesterday from Senate Republicans, Independents and Democrats.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, saw in Mr. Mellon's radio speech Saturday night a move toward extending the income tax to the lower incomes. He declared this to be on the same principle as the lowering of wages.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, of the finance committee, said "the Mellon speech is an obvious attempt to sustain the evident intention of the administration not to have a tax raise at the next session.

Says Politics May Prevent Tax Increase.

He called for a balancing of the budget and said nothing can stand in the way of a tax increase next session "except playing politics with the Treasury."

Senator Hull (Democrat), Tennessee, a veteran on revenue legislation, took the Treasury to task for failing to take steps for revision of taxes when the business depression first set in.

Both Senators Hull and Couzens predicted the accumulated deficit for the Government would reach $2,000,000,000 by the end of another fiscal year.

More Securities to Be Sold.

Meanwhile, Secretary Mellon announced that tenders for $80,000,000 in Treasury bills would be received by the Treasury next Thursday, bringing to $2,090,000,000 the amount of securities issued by the Government since March 15.

The bills will be sold to the highest bidder and redeemed at face value in 91 days.

Mellon, in a radio speech Saturday night, suggested that the tax system should be revised to provide a more regular flow of income. Indications grew yesterday that Treasury officials were watching closely the Government's finances and probably would determine late next fall whether to recommend to Congress that the revision be undertaken at that time.

Forsees Less Purchasing Power.

Senator Borah said in his statement:

"It seems to be understood that the Secretary has in mind the broadening of the base for the income tax, the lowering of the exemptions. That supposition is based upon the statement in his address calling attention to the fact that out of 120,000,000 people, 380,000 pay 97 per cent of the total amount received from individual income taxes.

"In my judgment, the lowering of the exemptions and the taxing of the smaller incomes is on the same principle as the lowering of wages. Both would have the effect of reducing still further the purchasing power of the great body of people.

"We are committed to the proposition, and wisely so, against lowering the wage scale. We believe that to do so would still further reduce the purchasing power of our people. This would be equally true in the matter of lowering the exemption and laying a tax upon small incomes."

Mellon Seen Passing "Buck."

Senator Couzens challenged the contention of Secretary Mellon that the Treasury had recommended revisions in the tax law. He also complained that Mr. Mellon after accepting credit for the past surpluses and tax reductions "is trying now to pass the buck to Congress."

The Michigan Republican proposed the re-creation of the gift tax and the raising of the estate tax. He further suggested that the graduation of the surtax be continued above the incomes of $100,000, where it now ends.

"One of the criticisms we have of other nations," he said, "is that they have not balanced their budgets. If we are to be consistent we should balance our budget. Nothing can stand in the way of a tax increase in

WHITE HOUSE TO GET CEREMONY OFFICIAL

Stimson Selects Full-Time Man to Superintend All Social Functions.

The task of arranging White House functions and of greeting foreign dignitaries is to be made a full-time job, it was announced at the State Department yesterday.

The man who will hold down the new post has been selected, but Secretary of State Stimson is not yet ready to make known his identity. Nor is Secretary Stimson yet ready to say what his title will be. In Europe, such an official is usually called the "marshal of the palace," or the "master of ceremonies."

Up until now, the business of deciding who shall sit next to whom at White House parties has been handled by the chief of the division of international conferences and protocol, an official whose principal work consists of arranging for American participation in international conferences.

So greatly has the number of such conferences increased—there were 80 last year—that Secretary Stimson decided to relieve the chief of the division of the work of arranging White House ceremonies.

The State Department had made known his plans yesterday in announcing that James C. Dunn, of New York, had been made chief of the Division of International Conferences and Protocol. This office has been vacant since the resignation of Ferdinand Lammot Belin. In the interim Richard Southgate has been acting chief, and also has been arranging White House ceremonies and escorting visiting dignitaries like the King of Siam.

Warren Delano Robbins, former chief of the conference division and, consequently, White House ceremonial officer, now the Minister to El Salvador, recently has come to Washington on leave. The State Department would not say whether or not he is to be given the full-time job of arranging White House affairs and looking after visitors.

Whoever the new ceremonial officer is, he will not hand out any advice to Washington's hostesses. In the old days, the State Department gave out advice freely, explaining where an ambassador should sit, where a senator should be located, and so on.

When the Longworth-Gann battle broke out, however, Secretary Stimson announced that the State Department would no longer determine questions of general social precedence in Washington.

Envoy Beaten by Thugs To Undergo Operation

Dr. Carlos Leiva, Charge d'Affaires of the El Salvadorean Legation, who suffered a skull fracture at the hands of attackers whom he surprised hauling away liquors from the legation several weeks ago, will be operated on at Emergency Hospital this morning. Dr. Herbert Hermann Schoenfeld, prominent Capital surgeon, will perform the operation.

The Latin-American envoy himself a doctor of medicine, has been getting along satisfactorily but it was decided to operate as a precautionary measure and to remove pressure on the brain. Dr. Leiva should be able to leave the hospital within two weeks. Dr. Schoenfeld said last night.

ELECTRIC RATE CUT LOOMS AT CITY'S HEARING

Utilities Body Indicates Intention to Change Sliding Scale.

REDUCTION PROPOSED IS FOUGHT BY BOWEN

Benefits to Users Under Plan Would Be Delayed for Many Months.

The Public Utilities Commission at an all-day hearing yesterday gave every indication that it is preparing to alter the sliding scale under which electric rates have been established for the past six years in Washington, regardless of the contention of the Potomac Electric Power Co. that it has no such right under the consent decree.

Overriding the continual objections of S. Russel Bowen, counsel of the power company, the commission permitted its counsel, William W. Bride, and William A. Roberts, to introduce a mass of evidence and testimony to the effect that the utility has yearly increased its gross revenue, sales of current and net revenue under the present sliding scale, and has every year, save in 1927, increased its rate of return until last year it reached 10.69 per cent.

One of the most interesting exhibits offered by the commission was based on its proposed revision of the sliding scale, suggested recently as a compromise measure, but rejected by the power company.

Base of Proposed Change.

The tabulations presented were based on a revision of rates for the years 1929, 1930 and 1931, due to applying a 7 per cent rate of return in place of the 7½ per cent allowed by the present sliding scale, and by adjusting the excess profits to be divided with the public, instead of half and half as now, as follows: One-half when below 8 per cent, three-fourths between 8 and 9 per cent, and five-sixths when in excess of 9 per cent, these shares going to the public in lower rates.

Such a system, when applied to the figures for 1928, 1929 and 1930, the exhibit showed, would have given Washington household consumers a rate of 3.5 cents per kilowatt hour for this year, instead of the 4.2 cents now in use.

At the same time, the company would have earned 9.3 per cent return on its rate base during 1930, and there would have been excess profits of $1,125,636. Figures were also offered to show that returns during the first quarter of this year are greater than anticipated, when the new schedule of rates for 1931 were established in January.

Battle Marks Hearing.

The hearing during the morning was taken up largely with a battle between the opposing attorneys, while in the afternoon the opposing statisticians took the field, armed with blue print exhibits and tabulations. A few more witnesses are to be heard this morning, beginning at 10 o'clock, at which time any laymen will be heard.

Following the conclusion of the hearing, the commission will take the data and argument under advisement. Within a short while, it is expected to announce a new sliding scale, intended to decrease the revenue of the power company and to reduce correspondingly the electric rates to consumers.

Unless a compromise is agreed to in the meanwhile, the Potomac Electric Power Co. will in all probability appeal to the District Supreme Court, which promulgated the consent decree, and the legality of the court agreement and the rate-making power of the commission will be argued at length.

Reduction to Be Delayed.

Any reduction in rates to consumers will consequently probably be delayed for some months to come, even though the commission succeeds in scrapping the consent decree and clarifying its authority.

At the outset of the hearing Mr. Bowen questioned the right of the Sheriff Faces Trial In Senate Contempt

Philadelphia Refused to Reveal Source of Fund for Vare.

Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, must stand trial in Washington on a three-year-old indictment charging him with contempt of the Senate in refusing to tell the source of $50,000 contributed to William S. Vare's 1926 senatorial campaign, the United States Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

The ruling reversed the decision of the Philadelphia Circuit Court, which held the Senate committee, whose questions Cunningham declined to answer, was not competent to put the questions to Cunningham.

His bondsman will be ordered to bring him to Washington for arraignment as soon as the Supreme Court's mandate reversing previous decisions of the Third Circuit Court of the United States Court of Appeals, is made final, probably within a week.

A heavy docket, however, may prevent the District of Columbia Supreme Court from reaching the Cunningham case before fall. Even then he will be given an opportunity to file a demurrer with the court in an effort to show that the indictment does not charge him with a crime. If he fails in this he must face a jury. If found guilty he may be sentenced to as much as six months in the District Jail.

Honduran Aid Reports Annihilation of Revolt

New Orleans, La., May 25 (A.P.).—Dr. Frederico Smith, consul general of Honduras in New Orleans, announced today that he has received a cablegram from the presidential palace, at Tegucigalpa, claiming "annihilation" of the Ferrera revolt.

He said the message was signed by Garcia, private secretary to President Mejia Colindres, and read: "After eleven hours' combat near Tela, the Ferrerista revolution was annihilated yesterday. We will soon be in complete peace."

LIGHTHOUSE DEATH LAID TO LIQUOR RING

Prohibition Agent Testifies Man Held as Smuggler Admitted Crime.

Baltimore, May 25 (A.P.).—Testimony concerning a possible link between the mysterious death of a lighthouse keeper and the activities of a Chesapeake Bay liquor-smuggling outfit was given today as fourteen men were arraigned on Federal charges.

C. J. Callahan, a prohibition agent, who took part in the clean-up of a smuggling base at Taylors Island two weeks ago, testified that one of the fourteen men arrested pointed to a revenue agent and exclaimed:

"There go the rats that turned us in. Well, that lighthouse keeper got in the headlines. We did that. What these guys get will be worse."

The prisoner, Callahan said, was Guy Parkhurst, alias Frank Weber, of New York. Another prisoner, he said, tried to silence Parkhurst, and the latter said afterward: "If you guys will forget that crack of mine we will be good friends."

Six lawyers from New York made an effort to halt the prosecution of the fourteen men, who were placed under bonds totaling $126,000 following their arrest, on the ground that the search and seizure of two express cruisers and three motor trucks was illegal.

The lighthouse keeper was Ullman Owens, who had charge of the lonely Holland Bar light near Crisfield. He was found dead March 18 and a verdict of accidental death was given, though his relatives insisted they believed liquor runners had killed him. The Federal officers indicated at the hearing that the information which led to the raids came from oystermen and fishermen.

AGENT SUES GRAPE FIRM FOR $250,000

Client of Mrs. Willebrandt Has Not Kept Contract, Salesman Avers.

A suit to compel Fruit Industries, Limited, of San Francisco, Calif., to live up to the terms of a sales agreement with him, and to pay him $250,000 damages because of its failure thus far to abide by the terms of the signed agreement, was instituted yesterday in the District Supreme Court by L. W. McCormick, of 815 Fifteenth street northwest.

The suit was directed against Fruit Industries, in care of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, of the Shoreham Building, legal adviser to the California company.

After citing that the company is in the business of manufacture and sale of grape concentrates in keg or five-gallon cans, McCormick asserted that he had been engaged by Donald D. Conn, described as managing director, to form sales groups in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and other cities. He made several trips to these cities at an expense of time and money, McCormick says.

Notwithstanding his performance of the duties taken up by him in the contract, McCormick says, on February 12, 1931, he was notified that territories allotted to him had been given to others, and that he should refrain thereafter from representing to any one that he had any agreement with the company.

McCormick, whose suit was filed by Attorneys William E. Leahy, William J. Hughes, jr., and Lawrence P. Mattingly, has continued his work, anyway, he says, and is seeking redress for sales made in his terrftory through other than his own agents.

Mayflower Records Ordered Surrendered

Decree Issued After Receivers Complain Operators Refused Data; Bankruptcy Action Filed Against Hotel Company Financiers.

Operators of the Mayflower Hotel yesterday were ordered by Justice Oscar R. Luhring to turn over all books and records to Thomas P. Littlepage and Joshua Evans, jr., who last week were named temporary receivers for Mayflower Hotel Co.

The order was issued against Daniel J. O'Brien, manager of the company, following the receivers' complaint that operators of the hotel had twice refused them access to the records.

Coincident with the action here, involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were filed in Portland, Me., against the American Bond & Mortgage Co., $30,000,000 corporation which financed the Mayflower, according to Associated Press dispatches.

The petition filed in Portland claimed the concern has $5,000,000 in liabilities. The company, which has headquarters in Chicago, owns the Mayflower Hotel Co., according to the petition for receivership filed here last week. The Mayflower Hotel Corporation, which has a 25-year lease on the hotel property, is said to be a subsidiary.

The Portland petition claimed that preferential payments to New York officers of the company materially reduced assets, while individual petitioners charged the concern failed to redeem bond interest coupons or principal, Associated Press dispatches stated.

In asking that the management of the Mayflower be required to submit all records to the hotel's receivers, Mr. Littlepage pointed out yesterday that the Mayflower Hotel Co. owns 100 per cent of the stock of the managing corporation, and that both are Delaware corporations. He said the right to the inspection of the Mayflower's books is thus with the receivers.

Mayflower proceedings yesterday were further complicated by another development.

Three men, representing themselves as a "protective committee" for owners of second trust notes of the Mayflower Hotel Co., filed in the District Supreme Court a request to be made parties to the receivership proceedings involving the company.

The men, Eugene F. Kinkead, Lawrence B. Ellman and Frank C. Ferguson, all of New York City, informed the court that at a meeting of second mortgage bondholders in New York March 30 they were appointed to "conserve and protect" the rights of owners of the second trust bonds. A large number of the holders of these bonds were represented at the meeting, the petition says.

Because of their appointments, the men claim they have a direct interest in the case, both in the pending receivership instance and in any future proceedings that may have a bearing on the hotel or the bonds.

The petition will be submitted to Justice Oscar Luhring today. He had jurisdiction of the case filed by Mabel Willebrandt, and will continue to hold that jurisdiction so that all the details of the case will come before him.

Petitioners who yesterday moved to force the American Bond & Mortgage

POLICE ARREST MAN IN KILLING OF CUNNINGHAM

Albert Gordon, 25, Held for Examination in Mystery Death.

TWO IN ZIRKLE CASE QUIZZED IN SHOOTING

Detectives Assert Versions of Affair Differ; Wife of Taxi Man Freed.

Albert Gordon, 25 years old, is being held at the First Precinct station in the slaying of Jack Cunningham, alain police informer.

In the murder of Irving Zirkle, detectives last night questioned Robert E. Martz, 20 years old, who is charged with the murder, and Harry Burch, 27 years old, held for investigation in the murder, in the hope of establishing a motive.

Gordon's arrest followed information received by police that he was seen in the vicinity of Fourteenth and I streets northwest, about the time Cunningham was shot. He was questioned briefly by Acting Chief of Detectives Edward J. Kelly, and ordered held.

Will Resume Inquest Today.

An inquest into the death of Cunningham will be continued today at the District Morgue. The inquiry was begun yesterday, during which Mrs. Helen Cunningham, widow of the slain informer, and thre of his companions, testified regarding his movements on the night of May 18.

There is an inclination on the part of police to believe that Cunningham's death is directly associated with the attempted hijacking of the Legation of El Salvador, his activities as a police informer and the reputed existence of an alcohol ring that supplies bootleggers with alcohol.

While police were delving into Cunningham's activities, another group of detectives were trying to find a motive for the Zirkle killing in the Ninth street poolroom. They are not willing to accept the story that the killing was "accidental."

Prisoner's Wife Released.

Mrs. Florence Burch, wife of one of the men held in the killing, appeared at the First Precinct yesterday for questioning, but was released when she convinced Sergt. H. W. Lineburg that she knew nothing of the shooting.

Denny Hughes, attorney for Burch and Martz, said that Martz was handing the weapon to Burch, who had asked for it, when it was accidentally discharged, hitting Zirkle. However, police regard this with skepticism, and will endeavor to show at the inquest today that the killing was premeditated.

One of the motives that have been advanced for the killing of Zirkle is that Martz, in an intoxicated condition, intended to shoot Zirkle because of a dispute over Mrs. Burch, the wife of his friend, Harry Burch.

Statements Conflict, Claim.

Burch and Martz, shackled together, were brought to headquarters last night, where the two men made contradictory statements, according to police. Martz said he was handing the gun to Burch when it was discharged. This was denied by Burch.

Gordon, the Cunningham killing suspect, was questioned last night by Precinct Detectives A. D. Mansfield and J. A. Mostyn regarding his activities. Gordon gave his occupation as a clerk. He lives in Princeton place, near Warner street northwest.

Detectives are particularly interested in a report that an alcohol ring has attempted to gain a foothold here. They are investigating rumors that Cunningham was employed by a gambler who dealt in alcohol. Cunningham, the reports said, had been soliciting orders for alcohol from bootleggers, and instead of giving them to a group who have several speakeasies in the downtown section.

Double Dealings Suspected.

The duplicity of his dealings in this respect, the police believe, may

Vatican-Fascist Ill-Feeling Grows; Papal Driver Is Hit

Charges of Mistreatment of Catholic Student Residents Are Answered by Declaration That Various Parish Priests Had Protested Mussolini's Regime.

Rome, May 25 (U.P.).—Charges of mistreatment of Catholic students and residents of Vatican City by Fascists, made today in the papal state, were followed by Fascist counter charges that various parish priests had openly protested the regime of Premier Benito Mussolini.

The strain on relations between the Holy See and the Fascist government was intensified Sunday when the driver of a Vatican City mail truck, carrying personal letters of Pope Pius XI to the Rome station, was beaten and slightly injured by Fascists. He had failed to halt his machine during a Fascist parade.

The truck driver's assistant was slapped by a Fascist militia officer.

Meanwhile, the Osservatore Romano, semiofficial Vatican organ, charged that Fascist students burned copies of the Osservatore Saturday when it published the speech of the Pope to Italian Catholic university students. The papers were burned in front of Rome University, while students shouted "Down with the Pope! Death to the Pope!"

The newspaper protested that neither police nor university authorities intervened to halt the anti-Pope demonstration. It also said the button of the Catholic College Men's Association was forcibly torn from the buttonholes of members of the organization and Fascists injured the eye of one Catholic student who refused to remove the emblem.

The student was attacked in front of Rome University at the time of the

POPE RAPS SPANISH ANTICHURCH RIOTING

Cabinet Is Believed Awaiting Discussion Before Giving Answer to Protest.

Madrid, May 25 (A.P.).—Minister of the Interior Maura announced tonight that the government had received a note from Pope Pius XI protesting against the recent anticlerical disturbances in Spain.

The minister refused to divulge the text of the protest, but said it was "couched in cordial terms." Although members of the cabinet continued to observe secrecy in regard to the negotiations with Vatican City, it was understood that the Papal protest was discussed thoroughly at the meeting tonight.

When newspapermen insisted that Minister Maura reveal the contents of the Vatican note, he replied:

"We are not able to do that yet. It would be a breach of etiquette. I assure you the note was very cordial. It seems to me to be more of a prayer to God for everybody's pardon than an actual protest."

From reliable sources, however, it was learned that the Vatican's protest was presented several days ago to President Alcala Zamora by Papal Nuncio Tedeschini and that it was divided into three principal parts.

The first part, it was learned, was a protest against the destruction of and attacks upon church property, not only because the property had been destroyed, but because sacred images had been profaned and some of the clergy maltreated.

The second point in the protest complained of an alleged anticatholic campaign which, it was charged, was being conducted by Cabinet Ministers Da Los Rios and Marcelino Womingo.

The third part of the note was said to contain a protest against what was said to be Cardinal Primate Segura's having been compelled to leave Spain.

Because some of the members of the cabinet are out of the city, it was believed tonight the government would not attempt to dictate a reply until the whole cabinet could discuss the note.

Selection of Pantages Jury Begins on Coast

Defense motions asking separate trials for Pantages and Jesse H. Shreve, wealthy San Diego business man, were overruled. They went to trial with William Pobelmann and Olive Clark Day, alleged opeartors of the market.

OATH IS DENIED 2 WHO DECLINE TO BEAR ARMS

Supreme Court, by Scant Margin, Turns Down Canadian Pair.

SCHWIMMER RULING CITED AS PRECEDENT

Chief Justice Hughes, Three Others Dissent; Appeal Attracts Crowd.

(Associated Press.)

By a majority of one, the Supreme Court yesterday decided an applicant for citizenship must take an oath to fight, if necessary, for the United States.

This conclusion was reached in the cases of Marie A. Bland, now in New York, Canadian war nurse, and Prof. Douglas Clyde MacIntosh, Yale theology professor, also a Canadian.

Justice Sutherland delivered the majority opinion and Justices Butler, McReynolds, Van Devanter and Roberts agreed. Chief Justice Hughes read a vigorous dissent and Justices Holmes, Brandeis and Stone, often found together in minority opinions in the past, also dissented.

Cites Decision on Hungarian.

The government, in opposing the naturalization of Miss Bland and Prof. MacIntosh because they would not take an oath to bear arms in defense of the United States under all circumstances, said the question already had been settled by the refusal of the court to allow Rosika Schwimmer, Hungarian writer and linguist, to become a citizen.

She also refused to take an oath to fight for the country. Justice Sutherland took the view the cases yesterday were ruled by the principle laid down in barring her.

He quoted from the decision of Justice Butler in that case, on May 27, 1929, which said: "It is the duty of citizens by force of arms to defend our Government against all enemies whenever necessity arises is a fundamental principle of the Constitution."

Requirements Held Vague.

Chief Justice Hughes said the cases hinged on the narrow point whether Congress had exacted a promise to bear arms as a condition of its grant of naturalization.

"That the Congress has not made such an express promise is apparent," he said. "The question is whether that exaction is to be implied from certain general words which do not, as it seems to me, either literally, or historically, demand the implication."

Every seat in the courtroom was taken as Justice Sutherland began delivering the decision. His first words were low, but as he proceeded, his voice rang throughout the chamber.

"There are few finer, or more exalted sentiments than that which finds expression in opposition to war," he said. "Peace is a sweet and holy thing and war is a hateful and abominable thing to be avoided by any sacrifice or concession that a free people can make.

Tolerates No Qualifications.

"But thus far mankind has been unable to devise any method of indefinitely prolonging the one or entirely abolishing the other; and, unfortunately, there is nothing which seems to afford positive ground for thinking that the near future will witness the beginning of the reign of perpetual peace for which all good men and women everywhere never cease to pray."

He said the war power tolerated no qualifications, or limitations and that Congress, not the Constitution, had relieved the obligation of armed service from citizens who are conscientious objectors.

Chief Justice Hughes said the oath of naturalization was in substance the one required of civil officers.

To conclude that the general oath of office would bar citizens from office who had religious scruples against bearing arms, he said, would be repugnant to "the fundamental principle of representative government." He added he saw no ground for interpreting the two oaths differently.

Binding Conscience Assailed.

The Chief Justice said the attempt to bind one's conscience by the taking of oaths, or the submission to

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 3 and 22 Today

tests, has been the cause of many deplorable conflicts.

"The Congress has sought to avoid such conflicts in this country," he said, "by respecting our happy tradition. * * * It would require strong evidence that the Congress intended a reversal of its policy in prescribing the general terms of the naturalization oath. I find no such evidence."

Both Prof. MacIntosh and Miss Bland saw service in the World War, the former as a chaplain at the front and the latter as a nurse, who cared for American soldiers at Brest after the armistice.

Prof. MacIntosh said he would fight if he thought a war morally justified, but Miss Bland said she would not be willing to bear arms under any circumstances, but was willing to go to the front line trenches to nurse in case of war.

Lower Courts Disagreed.

They were denied citizenship in a lower Federal court, but the second Circuit Court of Appeals held they were entitled to naturalization.

The decision and dissenting opinion were handed down in the case of Prof. MacIntosh, but both Justice Sutherland and the Chief Justice said the same set of circumstances controlled in the case of Miss Bland.

Justice Sutherland said proof that Congress regarded admission to citizenship as a serious matter was seen from the conditions and precautions which surrounded it.

He said that portion of the statute which required examination of the applicant and witness in open court seemed to him to indicate clearly that the Government wished to determine whether the prospective citizen would "assist in the defense of the country, not to the extent or in the manner he may choose, but to such extent and in such manner as he lawfully may be required to do."

Churchmen Urged Citizenship.

"In express terms," he added, "Congress is empowered to 'declare war,' which necessarily connotes the plenary power to wage war with all the force necessary to make effective and to 'raise armies,' which necessarily connotes the like power to say who shall serve in them and in what way."

The American Friends Service committee, in behalf of the Quakers, and a number of prominent Episcopal churchmen had filed briefs urging that the two be granted citizenship. Prof. MacIntosh is a Baptist and Miss Bland an Episcopalian.

Chief Justice Hughes referred to the "exemplary" qualifications of Prof. MacIntosh and said there were many ways of defending the country in time of war other than by bearing arms. He said he thought there was ample opportunity for essential services without overriding religious scruples.

Moral Duty Maintained.

"While it has always been recognized that the supreme power of government may be exerted and disobedience to its commands may be punished," he said, "we know that with many of our worthy citizens it would be a most heart-searching question if they were asked whether they would promise to obey a law believed to be in conflict with religious duty.

"Many of their most honored exemplars in the past have been willing to suffer imprisonment or even death rather than to make such a promise. * * *

"Much has been said of the paramount duty of the state, a duty to be recognized, it is urged, even though it conflicts with convictions of duty to God * * * When one's belief collides with the power of the state, the latter is supreme within its sphere and submission or punishment follows. But, in the forum of conscience, duty to a moral power higher than the state has always been maintained. The reservation of that supreme obligation, as a matter of principle, would unquestionably be made by many of our conscientious and law-abiding citizens."

Supreme Court Clears Way to Hear Fall Plea

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court yesterday cleared the way for action on any petition which Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, may file before Friday, seeking to set aside his conviction of accepting a bribe in the Naval Oil Reserve leases and his sentence of one year in prison and a fine of $100,000.

When the Court of Appeals here sustained the trial court, counsel for Fall obtained a stay of the mandate so that he would not be committed to the penitentiary pending the filing of a petition for review by the United States Supreme Court. The stay expires this week, and it is expected Fall's petition will be filed in a day or two.

Position Is Unaltered, Professor Declares

New Haven, Conn., May 25 (A.P.).—Dr. Douglas C. MacIntosh, Dwight professor of theology in the Yale Divinity School, said, "My position is unaltered," when he received word that he had been denied American citizenship by a Supreme Court decision today. He declined to comment further.

Insisting in his citizenship application and later in court hearings that his first allegiance was to the will of God, Prof. MacIntosh refused to make an unqualified promise to bear arms. He said he would bear arms only if he felt the cause was morally justified.

celebration of the anniversary of Italy's entrance into the World War, the newspaper said, and later was beaten by twelve Fascists, who knocked out his teeth because he persisted in the determination to wear the emblem.

The newspaper Lavoro Fascista replied to the charges, and both the Osservatore Romano and the Fascist newspaper have started carrying regular columns in which anti-Catholic and anti-Fascist manifestations, respectively, are reported.

Lavoro Fascista said certain parish priests had openly prayed against the Fascist regime and that the priests in the provinces of Sondrio and Gorizia had prevented children from entering churches, if they wore the Balillas (Fascist) uniform.

The newspaper charged that the priests in Dosolo, province of Mantua, had refused to fly the tricolor from the bell towers Sunday, an Italian national holiday.

There has long been a certain strain on relations between the Holy See and the Mussolini government. Despite the fact that it was the Fascist regime that concluded the Lateran treaties restoring sovereignty to the Pope. At various times the Pope has severely criticized the Fascist government, particularly in regard to educational institutions and to the emphasis placed on sports for women in Italy.

POSTAL CUT HELD DUE TO VACANCIES

Personnel Lowered by 2,100 Coleman Says, as Kelly Attacks Decrease.

(Associated Press.)

A $38,000,000 reduction in Postoffice Department expenses this fiscal year was said yesterday by Arch Coleman, First Assistant Postmaster General, to have been due largely to vacancies in personnel which had not been filled.

His statement was made after President Hoover had returned to the White House following week-end conferences at his Rapidan camp on the postal deficit. The Chief Executive expected a $38,000,000 saving this year and $15,000,000 next year.

Meanwhile, Representative Kelly, of Pennsylvania, a Republican member of the House postoffice committee, said, "If the President and Postmaster General intend to curtail service to effect the economy in the Postoffice Department it will be a bad policy and will be opposed in the next Congress.

Increased Volume Answer.

"Increased volume of mail is the answer to the postal problem of today and we certainly can't get an increase by a reduction of service," he added.

Mr. Coleman said a decrease of 7 to 15 per cent in the volume of mail during the depression had left the postal service overmanned and the situation had been met by not filling vacancies resulting from death, retirement or dismissal for cause.

The personnel had been lowered by about 2,100, he said, adding, "not a single employe has been discharged except for cause."

The President's week-end conference was the third he had held in an effort to find ways of reducing Government expenditures. Previously he had conferred with War and Interior officials and plans were announced for decreasing expenses in those departments.

Treasury or Justice Next.

Next week-end the President is expected to study either the Treasury or Justice expeditures, with other departments to come under scrutiny later. Mr. Hoover hopes to reduce government expenditures annually by $125,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Secretary Adams returned yesterday from an inspection trip on the Pacific coast, and prepared to cooperate in holding down expeditures.

"We are, of course, eager to economize," he said, "but I am not prepared to discuss the matter."

Recently Assistant Secretary Jahncke said that for two months the department had intensified studies of "means whereby our shore establishment might be conducted on a more efficient basis."

SUSPECT IN SLAYING OF CUNNINGHAM HELD

have supplied the motive for the shots that took his life early last Tuesday morning, near his home on I street near Fourteenth street.

Together with this, the police believe, that he knew the participants in the hi-jacking of the Legation of El Salvador, and that his trip to the First Precinct an hour before he was shot, may have been taken by the hi-jackers as an indication that he had informed on them.

Actually, however, his trip to the precinct was to give police a gun with which Burt L. Smith was shot early this month in a Twelfth street speakeasy and which was said to be accidental.

Says Husband Kept Silence.

At the inquest yesterday Mrs. Cunningham testified her husband refused to tell her the identity of the one who shot him. Others who testified were George W. Mattingly, of Sixth street near E street northwest; Edward S. Tipton, of F street near Sixth street northeast, and Joseph Harvey, of Twelfth street near I street northwest.

Mattingly said Cunningham left the apartment on H street near Twelfth street, where several persons were drinking, twice during the night he was shot. Each time he went to the First Precinct.

One of the speakeasies which Cunningham frequented, police learned, is owned by a relative of a bootlegger who specializes in alcohol selling to smaller bootleggers and who was the recipient of the orders Cunningham obtained. Instead of giving them to the man by whom he was employed, they believe, he diverted them to the other alcohol dealer.

Plea for Jews in Europe Made as Drive Begins

Pleading to all Jews to contribute to the fund for their impoverished and suffering brethren in Eastern Europe and Palestine, Oscar Leonard, of Washington, executive director of the Jewish Welfare Federation, gave the principal address last night at the opening meeting for a United Jewish Campaign in Wilmington, Del.

"Men and women who pioneer in Palestine," said Mr. Leonard, "are doing a job which will raise the level of all Jews wherever they may be. They show the world that Jews are not necessarily middle men; that Jews are capable of doing normal productive labor. Our pioneers are doing it under terrible handicaps. It is for us to sacrifice a little money while they sacrifice a great deal more and sometime life itself."

Fading Hope Drives Search For Potomac Canoe Victim

Young Girl Companion Unable to Tell How She Survived.

With some searchers still clinging to the hope that he will be rescued alive, the hunt continued last night for the body of Alvin James Nevitt, who is believed to have been drowned Saturday after the canoe in which the 20-year-old Washington youth and Miss Hilda Morrison, 16, of Cherrydale, Va., were paddling on the Potomac near Colonial Beach, Va., capsized.

Miss Morrison saved herself in an eighthour swim to shore in the chilly and choppy waters. News of the tragedy did not reach Washington until yesterday.

Then was disclosed the accident which befell the couple several hours after they had set out to paddle across the river to the Maryland shore, and then return. The outgoing trip was uneventful, but, coming back, a stiff wind overturned their frail craft a long distance from shore.

Both clung to fishing poles for a while then, realizing that they would have to strike out for shore or perish, they began the perilous swim, the girl taking the lead. The last Miss Morrison saw of her companion, he was following in her wake.

Eight hours later the girl managed to reach land. Even now she can not explain her survival. Through the darkness she wandered aimlessly, after patrially regaining her strength, until she reached an old barn near the shore. There she took shelter until dawn when she saw smoke rising from a knoll. This led her to the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Boorman, of 1816 Kalorama road northwest.

After being given dry colthing and proper treatment, Miss Morrison was put to bed and every precaution taken to prevent her taking pneumonia. Later she was removed to the Morrison cottage at Colonial Beach, where she and her aunt, Mrs. Willard J. Hahn, of 625 M street northeast, had been staying for several days.

HILDA MORRISON

B street northeast last Thursday for a pleasure outing and fishing trip, according to friends. His father, Leroy Nevitt, and brother, Otis Leroy, were among those who hunted for the body yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Morrison, the girl's parents, went to Wakefield, Va., which is near the spot where their daughter reached short, after hearing of the mishap, but later returned to their home in Cherrydale.

Although the river's great breadth and depth at the point where the boat capsized made difficult the work of dragging the waters and led to the belief that the body may never be recovered, Mr. Morrison last night ventured the theory that Nevitt may have swum back to the canoe, upon realizing that he could not make shore, drifted down the river with it and may still be alive.

This slim hope will be stifled should the canoe, which had not been located last night, be found.

Amos 'N' Andy Visit Denied Significant

Hoover Political Aid Says Plans for Campaign Not Discussed.

Lawrence Richey, secretary to President Hoover, said yesterday that politics had not been discussed while he had "Amos" and "Andy"—Freeman Cosden and Charles Correll—at his fishing camp in Catoctin, Md., over the week-end.

The suggestion that he had arranged with the radio stars to campaign for President Hoover over the radio was described by Secretary Richey as ridiculous.

Other guests at Mr. Richey's camp were W. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co.; Charles Francis Coe, magazine writer; Thomas Shipp, publicity engineer, of this city, and Frank Russell, of the National Broadcasting Co.

Cricket Club Liquor Charges Lose in Court

Philadelphia, May 25 (A.P.).—Two employes of the fashionable Philadelphia Cricket Club, arrested for violating the liquor laws after a raid on the club by city police a year ago, were acquitted by a jury today. A third employe was placed on probation for a year and ordered to pay the costs of prosecution, $19.87.

The men acquitted, Robert Trimble, 41, steward, and John Matacki, 33, a waiter, were charged with illegal possession. Philip Ciafardo, 28, described by police as a bartender in the club, was charged with illegal possession and sale.

Another Chinese Civil War Looms

Prediction Is Made After Nationalist Chairman Denies Reports.

Nanking, China, May 25 (A.P.).—Another Chinese civil war to begin in a few days with Nationalist government troops lined against rebels of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces, wasa predicted tonight by Chinese political circles.

The prediction followed denunciation by Nationalist Chairman Chiang Kai-Shek of asserted attempts by Communists in the provinces to overthrow his government after his refusal to resign.

In a statement to the nation, Chiang Kai-Shek said the crisis essentially is one between the Kuomintang (National Peoples party) and the Communists. The latter are desirous of exerting influence in Kuomintang circles, thereby hoping to gain power within the Nationalist government, which is subject to direction by the Quomintang.

Tennessee Governor's Impeachment Sought

Nashville, Tenn., May 25 (A.P.).—Appointment of a committee to consider whether impeachment proceedings should be brought against Gov. Henry H. Horton was sought in a resolution introduced today in the Tennessee House of Representatives.

The committee would consider the majority and minority reports of a legislative committee which investigated State affairs. Both reports submitted today when the Legislature reconvened after a recess.

HAYNES IS ON STAND IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Former Bank Head Explains Some of Exhibits but Is Perplexed by Two.

Taking the stand in his own defense, Harry V. Hayes, former bank president, yesterday began wading through the intricate maze of deposit slips, notes, checks and other items that have been presented to the jury by United States Attorney Leo A. Rover in the prosecution of Hayes on an indictment of 14 counts.

Guided by his attorney, H. Winship Wheatley, Haynes took up item labelled "1a" and explained it. He then took up item "1b" and told of that. The procedure of explaining each of the several score exhibits will be continued today, and may last for the balance of the week.

Two of the exhibits called to Haynes' attention caused him some perplexity. A note for $25,000 which he testified he had used to buy Gabriel Snubber stock for Mrs. Louise Chambers while he was at Atlantic City was the first of the items that he "didn't understand." The part, he said, he could not explain was how the $25,000 note escapé dbeing placed on the note register of his bank until it had been renewed three times.

The other exhibit that caused him to say he did not know all about was an item of $800 that he said was placed in his account while he was attending the banker's convention in Hot Springs in 1927. Mr. Haynes testified he could not say how this came to be placed in his account.

The trial opened yesterday with Mr. Wheatley outlinging to the jury the plan of defense. He took up each of the fourteen counts and explained that Haynes either did not know of them or had had nothing to do with them.

He made a general denial of the charges for his client. The cross-examination of Hayes by Mr. Rover will furnish what is expected to be the high light of the case. That will probably not come before the jury until the latter part of the week, for Mr. Wheatley has indicated that he preferred to explain to the satisfaction of the court every item.

MELLON'S TAX PLANS ROUSE IRE OF CRITICS

the next session except playing politics with the Treasury."

Hull Hits Lack of Foresight.

Senator Hull deplored the lack of specific recommendations by the Treasury.

"It is a pity," he said, "that the Treasury officials were entirely unable to grasp the real depth and breadth of the business collapse when Congress met, both in December, 1929, and December, 1930, and promptly make fiscal recommendations calculated to meet the conditions of the fiscal stress then plainly discernible in the future.

"The corporations in the previous year, 1928, had on hand surpluses and undivided profits of $53,000,000,000 and these doubtless were much greater in 1929. The Treasury, however, turned its back on this golden opportunity to reach swollen profits sufficient at least to take care of the fiscal year 1931, and, instead, proposed as a panic relief measure an actual reduction of 1 per cent in the entire normal tax."

Mellon Opposed Excise Elimination.

Secretary Mellon pointed out in his speech that he had objected to Congress eliminating some excise taxes three years ago, and this was accepted as indicating that he favored expansion of the tax system in that direction rather than changes in the income tax system, which he pronounced inadequate to meet the Government's needs.

While no serious thought has been given by officials to what direction the tax expansion might take, it was pointed out that a tax might be levied on gasoline which would provide a steady flow of income; it also was recalled that when Congress eliminated a tax on automobiles several years ago Secretary Mellon opposed the move.

Ultimate action, however, depends upon what the next six months produce. After the start of the next fiscal year, next July 1, the Treasury will get a better view of how much revenue the income taxes will provide, and when Congress convenes next December it will be able to lay before it an outline of what may be expected in the way of revenue for the 1932 fiscal year.

CURRENT EVENTS IN VIRGINIA AND MARYLAND

CHURCH HEAD LAUDS BLUE RIDGE SCHOOL

Bishop Declares Industrial Institution's Work Is Best Ever Seen.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 25.—Commenting on the report of the year's work at the Blue Ridge Industrial School, submitted by Dr. George P. Mayo at the recent session of the Council of the Diocese of Virginia, Bishop Henry St. George Tucker said that it is the best piece of missionary work he had seen anywhere.

The school, located at Bris, Greene County, in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains, had a total of 208 pupils the past session. Of these, 82 were boarding pupils. There were 73 in the high schol and 26 in the day school. A twelve-week summer course was given, with an enrollment of 37, 29 of the number being in the high school. Employes at the plant total nearly 50.

During 1930 the school had an average of 145 pupils in residence. The total cost of operation was $34,117.23, or about $235 per pupil. This was $35 less per pupil than in 1929, due to an increase of 40 in the boarding school.

The farm, orchard and cannery industries suffered severely from the unprecedented drought last year. A loss of $2,180.78 was recorded, as compared with a profit of $3,361.51 in 1929. The total value of all fruit harvested was $250, as compared with an average value of about $4,000 in a normal season.

While crops were bad, weather was good for building. Marked progress was made on a chapel being erected as a memorial to the late Bishop Gibson. A balance of $6,000 is needed to complete the building. A part of the third story in Mayo Hall was finished as a dormitory for sixteen older girls; a rock dormitory for older boys was built with a capacity for eighten boys and one teacher. A laundry was constructed.

The music department has been enlarged. A glee club has been organized among the girls, and a vested choir directs singing in chapel services. A two-year course in handicraft is required by the schol. In connection with this department is the neighborhood class in rug making for women. All girls are required to take a two-year course in home economics. A four-year course is given in agriculture. Work done in the industrial department last year was valued in excess of $3,000.

The president of the school is Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, of Richmond, and the secretary and treasurer is the Rev. George Pickett Mayo, D. D. Other trustees are Bishop Frederick D. Goodwin, of Warsaw; Archdeacon Frederick W. Neve, of Ivy; Murray M. McGuire, of Richmond; Bernard J. Harrison, of New York City; Frederick E. Nolting, of Richmond; Homan W. Walsh, of Charlottesville; Dr. R. M. Bird, of the University of Virginia; the Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, jr., of Richmond; George Gordon Battle, of New York City; Samuel H. Houston, of Philadelphia; Walter Coles Cabel, of Newport, R. I.; Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond; Archdeacon W. Roy Mason, of Charlottesville, and John M. Taylor, of Richmond.

MONTGOMERY BOND BIDS TO BE OPENED

County to Examine Offers on Issues for $248,000 at Rockville Today.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Bids on two bond issues totaling $248,000 will be opened today by the Montgomery County commissioners at their regular meeting in the courthouse at Rockville. The bids will be opened at noon.

The first series of $170,000 is known as the road construction funding bonds and consists of 170 bonds of $1,000 each. The bonds are dated June 15, 1931, and will bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent per annum, interest being payable semi-annually on the 15th day of June and December until the principal is paid at the Montgomery County National Bank at Rockville. The bonds are to be retired in yearly sections as follows: $3,000 in the years 1932 to 1933, $4,000 in the years 1934 to 1938 and $12,000 from 1939 to 1950.

The second series consists of 78 bonds of $1,000 each to be known as the school funding bonds of 1931, bearing 4½ per cent per annum interest, and are redeemable at the rate of $3,000 a year from 1934 to 1959.

The county commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids if they prove unsatisfactory. The bonds were authorized at the last session of the General Assembly to refund school and road indebtedness certificates.

Injuries sustained by Constable Lloyd Whipp, of Rockville police headquarters, when he was thrown from his motorcycle Sunday morning proved not as serious as had been expected, it was announced yesterday at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring. Mr. Whipp's leg was believed to have been broken when he was taken to the hospital, but X-ray photographs showed that it was only badly bruised. He was also severely bruised on the body.

Officer Whipp lost control of his motorcycle while rounding a curve on the road between Old Germantown and Darnestown, and crashed into a fence post. He was given first aid by Dr. William Linthicum of Rockville and then taken to the hospital.

William J. Jones, a patient at Walter Reed Hospital, was fined a total of $175 in Rockville Police Court yesterday on charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and driving without a permit by Judge Charles W. Woodward. He was given the alternative of serving 55 days in jail. He was arrested April 18 following a collision with a street car in front of the courthouse at Rockville.

Individual members of the Rockville Fire Department, acting as individuals and not the executive committee of the department, urged the granting of a permit to Villa Roma, it was stated yesterday. The department has no executive committee, according to officials, and no official action was taken by the department on the permit.

Warning to merchants of the county that traders' and other State licenses must be purchased this month to avoid payment of penalties was issued yesterday by Clayton K Watkins, clerk of the circuit court.

The State law provides that dealers failing to secure the licenses before June 1 will be subjected to 10 per cent a month penalty in addition to the license fee, Mr. Watkins said. The clerk of the court cannot make any exceptions, and is anxious to have the merchants apply for their licenses within the legal time in order that he will not have to assess the penalties. The application for the licenses should be made at the clerk's office in the Rockville courthouse.

FALLS CHURCH GROUP SUPPORTS TEACHERS

Mass Meeting Demands Pair Be Reappointed or That Board Resign.

Demanding immediate reappointment of two teachers passed over this year by the school board of Falls Church, Va., 100 citizens of the town, in mass meeting last night, called on board members either to comply with their wishes or resign at once.

A committee of five leading Falls Church citizens was instructed to present the demands of the citizens, who contend that both of the teachers, Miss Alice Williams, first grade, and Miss Mary Upson, fourth grade, have given "a superior grade of instruction" in their two years with the Falls Church schools.

Failing in the appeal to the board, the committee was advised, "First, to bring about the reappointment of the two school teachers, and, second, to effect at the earliest possible date a change in the entire membership of the board."

The committee appointed comprised Allan N. Garner, a Washington attorney; Dr. Macon Ware, R. A. Crenshaw, Mrs. W. N. Bowman and Mrs. C. A. Ransom. The resolution, which was adopted by the majority of those present, a few not voting, was proposed by Capt. Franklin D. Shaw.

Before the meeting adjourned, all favoring the return of the two teachers wer asked to rise. All but about a dozen stood up

A. L. Anderson presided at the meeting, which was called after petitions had been circulated and presented to the board, requesting that both Miss Williams and Miss Upson be reappointed. The school board comprises Horace E. Brown, chairman; Samuel H. Styles and Mrs. Harry Keyser. The resolution was presented after R. E Kendrick, president of the Northwest Citizens Association, of Falls Church, told of a special meeting held by the board earlier yesterday. The school board advised him, Mr. Kendrick said, that their action could be considered "final." He said board members instructed him to tell citizens attending the mass meeting it was "for the best interest of the pupils" that the reappointments were not made

Mr. Kendrick read a letter which he aid was written to the board by Miss Nancy Gregory Edwards, principal of the school, on whose recommendations, he said, the two teachers were not appointed again. She was quoted as saying that in view of the interest of citizens she was willing to change her recommendation as to Miss Williams, although she did not consider her teaching "up to standard." Miss Edwards was criticized for "failure to cooperate with parents" by a number who spoke at the meeting.

Boston, Mass., May 25 (A.P.).—New England thrilled today to the onrush of nearly 700 Army airplanes that swept eastward to the sea, from Springfield, Mass., and Hartford, Conn., to repel a mythical invader, threatening the coast.

One group of 36 raced northward across Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont to come to rest, finally, at the airports at Schnectady and Albany, N. Y. More than 600 others took part in a tremendous demonstration over Boston. The planes later flew back over southern New England to the four airports at Springfield and Hartford, at which they were quartered. But before the day was closed, another aerial demonstration was given over Springfield.

Old Boston cast away its tradition of aloofness as schools were closed and hundreds of thousands crowded the wide-sweeping shores of Old Harbor, Dorchester Bay. There a crack group of pursuit, attack and bombing planes, 39 in number roared through the sky in attack demonstration, low-altitude formation, pursuit assaults on attack planes, bombardment formation as in bombing raids, pursuit attacks on bombers, high speed formation flying, two pursuit planes in a "dog fight" and combat acrobatics.

The crowd remained to see the impressive 20-mile procession of 600 planes which came in from the west just after noon. Later, those same thousands of watchers, attempting to return to their homes, massed themselves at park exits and subway entrances in what police described as the worst jam of its kind in the city's history.

At the Columbia subway station of the Boston Elevated Railway, thousands were crushed together in a seething, reeling mass that policemen were unable to control. The screams of women and children rose above the roar of the crowd, and women fainted. Mounted policemen, with extreme difficulty, broke paths through the closely-packed throng to help remove women who had collapsed or other women who had been caught and endangered in the crush with small children.

Thousands of persons in downtown Boston failed, however, to catch a glimpse of the mighty armada. They watched from office and shop windows, and listened for the sound of the fleet's engines, only to turn away at last in disappointment. Threatening weather reports, Army Air Corps officers explained, caused a change in the original routing plans, and making it desirable to return the fleet to its bases as soon as possible.

One mishap marred the day's maneuvers. A pursuit plane nosed over in landing at Springfield. Lieut. Curtis Lemay, of the Twenty-seventh Pursuit Squadron, the pilot, said a locked brake on one wheel caused the accident, which damaged the plane somewhat. He was unhurt.

As for the mimic war that's been going on—there was not any battle off New England today. As the air forces flew eastward toward the sea, the theoretical enemy descending upon New England from Sable Island, turned and headed for a heavy fog bank. The attack of Army planes upon this mythical enemy then was abandoned.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, who personally commanded the maneuvers here today, informed Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois tonight that the enemy had continued due south and would appear in the Long Island area tomorrow morning. Gen. MacArthur planned to get back to Washington by about noon tomorrow.

Class Room Scene Of College Killing

Death of Memphis Senior Held Self-Inflicted; Shot Is Heard.

Memphis, Tenn., May 25 (A.P.).—William N. Mitchell, jr., 21, Grenada, Miss., a senior at Southwestern, a Presbyterian Church college here, was shot to death today in a classroom while other students were in chapel and police said it undoubtedly was a case of suicide.

Some of Mitchell's friends said he had been threatening to kill himself because a girl had been indifferent to him. Mitchell made high grades in his studies and would have been graduated Monday. He was business manager of a school publication.

He stayed away from chapel this morning, talked for a few moments with W. C. Rasberry, one of the college coaches, and then went into the classroom. Rasberry and some students said they heard a shot there soon after he entered. The body was found by the psychology professor, who entered the classroom to prepare for the day's work.

Phone Rate Conference Expected in Kensington

Following the presentation of heated arguments against the new telephone rates in Montgomery County's urban area at a meeting of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce last night, it was decided to have the public utilities committee schedule a conference with officials of the telephone company with the view of eliminating the objectionable features.

Details of the celebration of Kensington Day, June 5, at which Irving C. Root will be the chief speaker, were arranged. A committee headed by Mayor Frederick W. Brown was named to work on the matter of requesting rural free mail delivery in adjoining communities served by the Kensington postoffice.

Bicentennial Body Postpones Session

Quorum of Six Fails to Appear; Meeting Set June 8.

A meeting of the executive committee of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, scheduled for yesterday, was postponed to June 8 when only three members appeared. Six are required to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Those who appeared were Senator Fess (Republican), of Ohio; Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and former Representative R. Walton Moore (Democrat), of Virginia.

Senator Fess, who is vice chairman of the Bicentennial Commission, had called the meeting for the purpose of selecting an associate director to succeed Col. U. S. Grant 3d. Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, who is now directing plans for the celebration, is strongly opposed to the appointment of an another director, fearing that divided authority might jeopardize the entire program.

Supreme Court Annuls Ruling Against Firm in Detroit.

(Associated Press.)

An order of the Federal Trade Commission directing the Raladam Co. of Detroit, makers of an antifat preparation, to stop certain advertising was held invalid yesterday by the Supreme Court.

The commission based its case against the Raladam Co. on a charge of unfair methods of competition. Justice Sutherland, who delivered the opinion, however, said the commissioned had failed to show any injury to competitors through advertising.

He pointed out that none of the supposed competitors had appeared in the hearings which preceded the order against the Raladam Co. The only evidence, he added, came from medical sources and physicians who did not compete with the concern.

Illegitimacy Basis Of $2,000,000 Suit

Los Angeles Woman Files Second Petition as Flood Heir.

Redwood City, Calif., May 25 (A.P.).—Declaring Mrs. Eudore Ford Willette, of Oakland, is her mother, that she was born out of wedlock and that James L. Flood, late San Francisco millionaire, was her father and had her lelitimatized, Mrs. Constance Mae Gavin, of Los Angeles, filed another petition here today in her suit for $2,000,000 of the $9,000,000 Flood estate.

Before the second amended petition was filed Mrs. Gavin's attorneys were told she could not claim as she had sought to do that either the first Mrs. Flood or Mrs. Willette was her mother.

Superior Judge George H. Buck ruled she must claim one or the other and that the case must be tried on that basis. Attorneys for the Flood estate file a reply in which it was admitted Mrs. Gavin is the daughter of Mrs. Willette, but denied Flood was her father.

TWO ARE INDICTED IN GORDON MURDER

Police Still Seek Motive for Killing of Broadway Night Life Character.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The Bronx County grand jury late today indicted Harry Stein and Samuel Greenberg, alias Greenhauser, former convicts, for the strangulation of Vivian Gordon. The woman's body was found in a Van Courtlandt Park thicket February 26.

Meanwhile police were still casting about for a motive for the crime other than an obvious one of robbery, which they are inclined to believe was incidental. The indictment followed the appearance before the jury of Henry Schlitten, Newark chauffeur, who, police said, confessed he drove the death car and who named Stein and Greenberg as the slayers.

Greenberg was immediately taken before Supreme Court Justice Albert Cohn to plead to the indictment.

"I waive examination," he said. He was told he was not there for examination. He had no attorney and said he did not know whether he would retain one. He was remanded to jail.

Other witnesses before the jury were Isidor Lewis, who, police said, was with Schlitten when they hired the death car, and Mrs. Madeline Tully, rooming-house proprietor, in whose house Stein had lived.

Police said that shortly after the killing Stein tried to sell Vivian Gordon's silk coat to David Butterman, now a material witness for the prosecution. They said Butterman ripped the silk lining from the coat and gave it to Mrs. Tully, telling her to make a pillow case of it. Police said Mrs. Tully refused to answer questions before the jury. Justice Cohn held her in $25 000 bail.

Schlitten and Lewis were not arraigned as material witnesses. They will live in a hotel under police guard until the trial is over, police said.

Distrcit Attorney McLaughlin said Stein and Greenberg will be tried after the case of Rudolph Duringer, charged with the murder of Virginia Brannen, dance hall hostess, is disposed of. Duringer's trial is expected to start Wednesday.

Former Gandhi Ai Loses Job in Ohio

Herbert Miller Is Ousted From University; Fought Military Training.

Columbus, Ohio, May 25 (A.P.).—Ohio State University trustees failed to renew the teaching contract of Prof. Herbert A. Miller, of the sociology department, for next year, it became known today. Prof. Miller has headed the department since 1925.

Prof. Miller confirmed the report of his dismissal, but would make no further comment. He was notified that his contract would not be renewed by the university trustees and President George W. Richtmire while on a trip to New York several days ago. University officials refused to comment.

During a recent trip abroad Prof. Miller was closely associated with the nonviolence campaign of Mahatma Gandhi, Indian leader. He recently came into the lime light by opposing compulsory military training for students at the university. The trustees decided to continue compulsory military training, and President Richtmile, in a statementadvised faculty members and students that those who were criticizing certain conditions were under no obligation to remain at the university.

Big Bill Edwards Case Decision Is Postponed

White Plains, N. Y., May 25 (A.P.). Supreme Court Justice Witschief today deferred decision on Mrs. Norma Jones Edwards' motion for $10,000 counsel fees and $1,000 a week alimony pending outcome of her separation suit against William H. "Big Bill" Edwards.

The court said that not all the necessary papers had been submitted. He announced he had granted her application for a jury trial of charges of infidelity made by Edwards in a counterclaim for divorce. It will be tried in the fall.

Japanese Rail Strike Deferred.

Tokyo, May 25 (A.P.).—The threatened strike of 210,000 railway men, with possible spread to include all classes of workers in Japan, was deferred and perhaps averted today by Minister of Railways Egi, who agreed to ask the cabinet to rescind a wage cut affecting 9,000 railway officials.

Pope Blesses 38 Priests.

Expert Declares Women Surpass Men at Bridge

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—Ely Culbertson, recent winner of the Harold Vanderbilt bridge trophy, declares women are better bridge players than men.

"The average man," said Culbertson, "thinks he's perfect. He thinks he has nothing to learn. Women players know more and study more. I believe one reason women take to bridge is because it gives them an opportunity to settle the intellectual score with their husbands at the card table."

Culbertson is positive that the black eye bridge has been getting in divorce courts lately is entirely undeserved.

When couples fight at bridge, he says, it's generally because of something else that happened before they got to the party.

ELECTRIC RATE CUT LOOMS AT HEARING

commission to inquire into the sliding scale now in use, and moved that the proceedings be dismissed on eleven grounds, chief among which was that the consent decree bound the commission to the present scale. He further argued that any inquiry into the 1931 returns is premature, and that "the proceedings amount to an attempt to inflict a sheer wrong under the guise of regulation."

Introducing comparative figures, he further attempted to show that the increase in the power company's business for the first quarter of this year was not as great as the gain for the first quarter of 1930 over the corresponding period in 1929.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the commission, overruled this motion, as he did practically all of Mr. Bowen's objection throughout the day.

Harleigh H. Hartman, vice chairman, and the power company's counsel engaged in frequent altercations over legal questions.

1931 Loss Explained.

With Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission, on the stand, Mr. Roberts carefully drew from him figures to show that the current sold during the first quarter of this year showed an increase over the same period last year and that during March and April the percentage of this increase was greater than the corresponding gain was last year over the similar period in 1929.

He also attempted to show that the loss in net revenue experienced by the power company this year was due primarily to an increase in operating expenses, the most of which was new business. While the new business gained 25 per cent over last year, he brought out, the production costs increased only 2 per cent.

An attempt was made by Richmond B. Keech, the people's counsel, to introduce the question of the power company's sale of current to the Washington Railway & Electric Co., part of which is resold, but the commission sustained Mr. Bowen in his objection to this testimony as being outside the scope of the hearing.

The commission also refused to permit Mr. Bowen to offer testimony intended to show that the consumer's rate in Washington is lower than in any other city of the United States of 150,000 population or greater. Gen. Patrick held that such figures could have no bearing on the District's rate because of the numerous factors involved.

Air Force Pictured As Assuring Peace

Payne Holds Strength Is Deterrent to Possible Aggressors.

Boston, Mass., May 25 (A.P.).—The ability of the United States to mobilize its entire air force within a few hours to meet the threat of any aggressor was characterized tonight by Col. Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary of War, as a powerful influence for peace. Speaknig ta a reception of the Cross-Cup Pishon Post, American Legion, in connection with the Army air maneuvers here, Assistant Secretary Payne said:

"We no longer think in terms of the crude ships that performed such heroic service in France despite their mechanical limitations. We are basing our calculations on ships that can fly 200 miles or more an hour and climb to a height of 30,000 feet.

"Thta gives the would-be aggressor something to think about. Hours before he could come within striking distance of any one of our great coast cities he could be met by the entire air forces of this country."

3 Jurors Selected For Crowley Case

Many Express Prejudice and Second Day for Choices Is Required.

Mineola, N. Y., May 25 (A.P.).—So many men of Nassau County expressed prejudice in the case of Francis Crowley today that County Judge Lewis J. Smith had to adjourn the murder trial of the 19-year-old gunman after only three jurors had been picked.

Tomorrow a double panel of 100 veniremen will be called in an effort to find nine others to try the youth for the slaying of Patrolman Frederick Hirsch. The policeman was shot down when he approached an automobile in which Crowley was sitting with 16-year-old Helen Walsh. The two were captured later in an uptown Manhattan apartment after a gun fight and siege by 200 policemen.

The confessed "cop killer" sat chewing gum and smiling between two burly guards during the parade of prospective jurors.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

When you visit your physician for your periodic health examination, one of the very first things he asks you to do is to open your mouth wide, and to say "Ah." He is examining the delicate lining of your throat. "Ah!" There is not a man or woman who could even make this simple sound, if in the throat there were no Adam's Apple. For your Adam's Apple is your larynx—the voice box containing your vocal chords. And what a delicate piece of Nature's handiwork the Adam's Apple is. A slight cold—even a tiny particle lodged in the throat—and our voice often grows husky. In acute cases, we may even lose our voice for several days. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

MAN, 75, ATTEMPTS SUICIDE WITH KNIFE

Daniel Shelton Is Found by Niece With Throat and Wrist Slashed.

Three weeks of painful suffering from a tongue ailment led Daniel W. Shelton, 75 years old, of 1232 I street southeast, to slash his throat and wrist in an attempt to end his life late yesterday afternoon in the basement of his home. He was rushed by the Fire Rescue Squad to Casualty Hospital, where he was reported in a critical condition.

Mr. Shelton was found slumped in a chair in an unconscious condition by his niece, Mrs. Cora E. Murray, who was returning from an afternoon of shopping. A butcher knife was found on the floor beside the chair. The whereabouts of Mr. Shelton's wife are unknown, as they separated about 30 years ago. It is believed that she is not in the city.

Mr. Edward Pickford, of 492 Eighth street southeast, who has been treating Mr. Shelton for about three weeks, said that Mr. Shelton's particular ailment is not serious and not of a long-standing nature.

Mrs. Murray said that her uncle complained of excessive pain yesterday morning. In the afternoon Mr. Shelton went to Emergency Hospital, where he was given some medicine to ease the pain, police say. An hour later he was found by his niece.

American Tribute Paid Joan of Arc

Visitors Join in Ceremony at Rouen Honoring Woman Martyr.

Rouen, France, May 25 (A.P.).—Because the fourteenth anniversary of the arrival of the first contingent of the American Expeditionary Forces in Rouen coincided today with this city's picturesque Joan of Arc fete, Americans took a considerable part in the ceremonies commemorating the martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans here 500 years ago.

Delegations representing the American Legion and French veterans laid wreaths upon a plaque commemorating the arrival of units of the A. E. F. May 25, 1917. Afterwards, representatives of the former American doughboys paid a similar tribute at a monument to France's war dead.

An American Legion delegation also marched with the American flag in a picturesque cortege symbolizing the military history of France from the time of the Gauls who fought Julius Caesar down to the victories of 1918.

3 Auto Accidents Detain U. S. Mayors

None Hurt and Visitors in France Will Go to Paris Today.

Dinard, France, May 25 (A.P.).—Three minor auto accidents, in which no one was injured, interrupted the journey of the party of American mayors today from Mount St. Michel to Dinard.

Two of the cars used to transport the visiting party ran out of gasoline and went into ditches by the roadside. A third car ran into soft sand, necessitating the removal of a wheel, forcing Mayor Victor J. Miller, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mayor Daniel W. Holan, of Milwaukee, and Mayor John C. Porter, of Los Angeles, with their wives, to walk a half mile to this town.

The party will leave for Paris tomorrow, where it is due to arrive at 4:30 p. m., just in time to see the end of the opening of the American exhibit at the French Colonial Exposition.

Rheem Seeks Jury In Bankrupt Issue

Financier Denies Any Acts Justifying Charge and Asks for Trial.

Denying that he had committed any act of bankruptcy, Edmund D. Rheem, executive vice president of the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., yesterday asked the District Supreme Court for a jury trial on the issues raised two weeks ago when two women, holding notes issued by his firm, sought to have him adjudged a bankrupt.

He denied through his attorneys, Tobriner & Graham, that the women have provable claims or that they are creditors. He asserts that he should not be adjudged a bankrupt for any alleged cause cited in the petition.

Rheem's attorneys first sought to have the case thrown out of court and the answer was submitted because of a ruling by Justice Jesse Adkins denying the request and directing that Rheem file an answer to the suit. Attorney E. Hilton Jackson filed the petition and argued in support of it when it came before Justice Adkins.

Coed Taken Home After Note Threat

Second Letter in 3 Weeks Received at Syracuse; Guard Withdrawn.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 25 (A.P.).—A letter threatening harm to a Syracuse University coed unless her parents in Reading, Pa., to whom it was sent, paid over $50, has resulted in the girl being taken home, it was revealed at the university today.

It was the second letter of this nature in three weeks, said Dr. Eugenie A. Leonard, dean of women. The first was sent to a student from Schnectady. Her name and that of the Reading girl were not made known.

For a time police threw a guard about the home of the Schnectady girl. The guard was withdrawn when the police became convinced they had frightened off the anonymous letter writer, whose identity they were unable to ascertain.

Nipissing Mines Omits Its First Dividend

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—Directors of Nippissing Mines have omitted the quarterly dividend of seven and one-half cents due at this time, E. P. Earl, president, said the action was due to the fact that mining operations are unprofitable owing to the continued low price of silver.

"This is the first time since the organization of the company in 1906, that a quarterly dividend has been omitted," he said.

A dependable fountain of beauty

To meet the merciless test of daylight and sunlight, complexions must be naturally fine and petal smooth. Friendly cosmetics may enrich color and even help protect our skins from wind and dust—but only constant bathing with refreshing hot water and good soap will remove the clogging accumulation of waste particles that cause blemishes; will stimulate the tiny oil glands that keep skin clear, fresh and smooth.

Use plenty of hot water. Use it frequently and the perplexing problem of complexion care will solve itself.

The only dependable heater that brings an instant flow of water, neither lukewarm nor scalding hot—but at the ideal temperature for bathing—is the Self-Action Gas Water Heater. It operates itself. It is completely trouble-free and costs only a few cents a day to operate.

A visit to any of our display rooms will convince you that hot water, automatically, is a sound investment that will bring returns in beauty and health. A small down payment and the balance on liberal terms will put a Self-Operating Gas Water Heater in your home without delay. Ask about our "Bargain Basement."

UNFIT FOR CITIZENSHIP.

Once more the Supreme Court has sustained the spirit and letter of the Constitution by denying citizenship to two individuals who are unwilling to take an unconditional oath of allegiance to the United States. Justice Sutherland vigorously brushed aside the muddy thinking of the Circuit Court of Appeals and reversed its decision. The oath of allegiance to the United States must be taken without reservation, or the applicant is not entitled to become an American citizen.

The case of Prof. Douglas Clyde MacIntosh has attracted attention throughout the country. He was denied citizenship by the Department of Labor, and that decision was sustained by the Federal District Court at New Haven. But the decision was reversed in a feeble opinion by the Circuit Court. It was necessary for the Supreme Court to rebuke the lower tribunal for its resort to flim-flam philosophy in place of constitutional law.

Prof. MacIntosh made himself absurd by saying that he had no scruples against fighting, but that he would not defend the country merely because its Government might think that a war was necessary. He reserved for himself the right to repudiate his legal obligations. In short, he offered allegiance not to the Government and the Nation, but to his own judgment. The surprising thing is not that the Supreme Court should deny him citizenship, but that the Circuit Court could have found any basis whatsoever for ruling in his favor.

An applicant for naturalization, Justice Sutherland said, must be willing to respond to the call to defend his country when he is lawfully required to do so. Failing to meet this test, citizenship was denied to Rosika Schwimmer, and on the same basis Marie A. Bland finds herself rejected. So long as the life of the Nation is in danger individuals can not be permitted to decide whether or not the measures taken for its defense by the Government are justified. Congress must decide who shall bear arms. Those who are unwilling to accept the decision of Congress have no claim to the honor of American citizenship.

This straightforward decision of the highest tribunal should put an end to the clamor of pacifists for citizenship privileges.

PAYING EUROPE'S DEBT.

Representative Ramseyer, of Iowa, deserves to be known as a far-sighted politician because of his solicitude for future generations. The principal theme of the advice which he gave the War Policies Commission seems to be that posterity should not be called upon to pay any part of the debts contracted by this country during the war. He points out the horrors of accumulated interest. He lauds the virtue of an old policy which he seems to claim as his own brainchild, namely: Pay as you go.

Those people who are looking forward to a reduction of the sinking fund as a means of relieving the burdens upon the Treasury in these hard times will not, of course, take issue with the Iowan's dictum that it is a good thing to pay debts. But he insists that the Government should pay off a $26,000,000,000 debt in 25 years. This would take more than $1,000,000,000 per year out of a budget of some $4,000,000,000, exclusive of interest, which in itself is a large item. And the best reason he finds for such an unreasonable proposal is that "the obligations we contracted by the late war should not be heaped upon their (the future generation's) shoulders as an additional burden."

In his passion to get this debt paid off, Representative Ramseyer quietly ignores the fact that foreign governments owe the United States about $11,600,000,000. If that amount is deducted from the current American debt, it leaves an obligation against taxpayers of something more than $4,000,000,000. That could easily be wiped out in four prosperous years. The remaining debt could be liquidated as payments are received from abroad, and the taxpayers relieved of further burdens.

What does Mr. Ramseyer propose to do with this $11,600,000,000 which foreign governments owe to American taxpayers? Does he anticipate cancellation of these debts, so that taxpayers of the next decade will have to pay Europe's share of the war expense as well as America's? That is what complete payment of the public debt in 25 years would amount to.

MOTORIZED BANDITRY.

No instrument has played a more important part in the development of modern organized crime than the automobile. Theft of a car is comparatively easy. Its value is high and it affords a means of quick escape from the scene of crime. When a crime is to be committed the perpetrators are almost certain to steal an automobile in which to make their escape. It is difficult to trace criminals who use stolen cars and abandon them as soon as their depredations are completed. All of these factors combined have made the automobile one of the chief tools of criminal gangs.

The National Crime Commission (not the National Law Enforcement Commission) has made a special study of the relationship of the automobile to crime. It finds that losses through theft on insured cars alone amounted to more than $24,000,000 in 1929. The number and value of stolen cars are increasing, and existing laws are quite inadequate to handle the situation.

Ten years ago Congress passed the Dyer act, making it a felony to transport a stolen car across a State line. Since that time the Department of Justice has carried too large a share of the burden of prosecuting automobile thieves. Many of the States have been willing to shift this responsibility to the Government. But Uncle Sam is not in a position to curb the use of automobiles in crime, except to a limited degree. It is time that the States began to wake up to the necessity of combatting the motorized criminal.

One method advocated by the National Crime Commission is a uniform law regulating theft information, ownership records, &c. Such a law is in operation now in 25 States, but in the remaining States the detection of automobile thieves is only a haphazard process. In addition to this, strong State laws against automobile stealing and motorized banditry are needed. It is the duty of the States to protect their own citizens from the ravages of organized criminals, even though they may race from one State to another in high-powered cars to evade the law. The crime commission has performed a public service by pointing out the laxity of the States in this respect.

ATTACKING LOW PRICES.

A graduated tax on chain stores is asked by Representative Emanuel Celler, of New York, for the District of Columbia. He believes that, unless restricted, the chains will control half the retail trade in ten years. He proposes that Congress should set an example to the States by taxing two stores under one management $10 each; three stores, $20 each; four stores $30 each, and so on. He says:

> Chains undoubtedly satisfy an economic necessity. But they must not grow at the expense of the fearless, independent worth-while citizen struggling to operate his retail store and striving to maintain his family and educate his children. They can not compete against the expert and mass purchasing, skilled management and tremendous advertising power of the chains.

In his desire to protect the family of the independent store owner, Representative Celler seems to be willing to have thousands of families pay higher prices for everything they eat. The independent store owner or the aspiring clerk who would like to be his own boss, must, of course, view with alarm the efficiency and low prices that are made possible by mass buying. Their condition is not unlike the old cobbler who saw the arrival of the great shoe factory and realized it could produce shoes for a fraction of what it cost him to make them. Was there a Representative Celler to recommend that the factories be taxed out of existence to protect the honest cobbler?

Today, however, there are still cobblers who make expensive hand-turned shoes for those who can afford to pay the higher price. There will always be a place, too, for the independent grocer who will cater to unusual tastes and carry a line of goods not handled by his chain competitors. There are always persons who are willing to pay a bit more for the convenience of a charge account, or the atmosphere of a more select store. This field is untouched by the chain stores.

It has not been many years since big business combinations were denounced as organizations formed to enforce higher prices. It is a remarkable change of front to see them today attacked because of low prices and efficient service, coupled with demands that they be penalized in order that inefficient small units may continue to thrive on high prices. The little independent grocer and the little oil well are in the same boat. They must both meet the competition of larger organizations that supply the American people with cheap products.

PIG STATUES.

The day is dawning for Sus Americanus. Soon the Department of Agriculture will announce that some Barye, the sculptor whose marble reproduction of Leo, the king of beasts, is recognized throughout the universe as the ne plus ultra of animal sculpture, has been found to render the honor which is due to the American Hog.

From the dawn of the Christian era, and even before, pigs have been known in literature, sacred, profane and juvenile. We read that devils, driven from human anatomies, were domiciled in a herd of swine. We know that, because the pig's hoofs are improperly built and that his digestive apparatus functions perfectly without the necessity of cud-chewing, his flesh is taboo among a very large proportion of the population of the earth. Every infant who has been properly brought up has been instructed in marketing problems through the story of the little pig that went to market. Elia in his essays explained how roast pig was discovered by a Chinese philosopher whose house caught fire, incidentally leading to wholesale arson. But careful searching through art catalogues, anthologies and encyclopedias fails to reveal that the hog had ever been honored by a place in the atelier of the sculptor—until the Department of Agriculture decided to enter the field of Art.

Now the department is ready to respond to an immediate call for pig statues (they call them models) "illustrating standards of three types and six grades" of the animal which can be relied upon to furnish nearly all types of vitamins needed for human sustenance, to say nothing of bristles for the shaving brush of the sculptor and leather for the saddles of the followers of the hounds. But the department is not satisfied with the statues which have thus far been produced in the studios of the scientists. What the Bureau of Animal Industry wants, more than anything else, is the ideal pig, the pig which, so to speak, will be the composite Apollo Belvidere, Venus de Medici and Mona Lisa of the porcine world. Unfortunately, of the $170,000,000 appropriated for the use of the farmer's pet department, not one dime can be used as a reward for the genius who is to produce the supreme masterpiece. Congress must come to the rescue.

From chittlings to bacon, from spare ribs to "sauer kraut mit speck," Porcus Americanus produces more varieties of real food than any other member of the animal kingdom, and the Department of Agriculture is to be praised for its determination to add the counterfeit presentment of the ideal pig to the Valhalla of the animal world.

Let the necessary funds be appropriated!

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS:

Northampton, Mass., May 25.—The impressive figures published at the convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks again demonstrated the far-reaching importance and power of these institutions. They have assets approaching $11,000,000,000, which are owned by 13,000,000 depositors. If this sum stood alone it would be worthy of comment, but to it must be added some $36,000,000,000 more held by the life insurance companies and the savings departments of commercial banks. This is the largest accumulation of money savings ever assembled by any people.

These funds have developed the country by financing Government loans, public utilities, industry, transportation, agriculture and home building.

The responsibility of the managers of such vast resources is very heavy. The attitude of the Government toward them and their investments is most important. By taxation, unwise regulation, or hostile legislation, the properties in which these savings of the people are invested can be impaired. If these great accumulations are to be conserved for the benefit of their scores of millions of owners they must have the constantly sympathetic consideration of the Government. Public officials can confer no greater benefit on the people than by protecting the property of these institutions. CALVIN COOLIDGE.

PACIFISM OUT OF BEDLAM

From the Chicago Tribune.

It is probably all for the best that the pacifist front is so frequently one of illogical and picayunish mentality. The protest against the maneuvers of the air forces affords a case in point. These operations were to test in the best and safest conditions possible the working of the war air machine in its very difficult problems of control and cooperation. If the emergency against which the air force is provided should demand its use the men and machines would have to perform the acts which the pacifists demanded they should not practice. It is a demand that the fliers should be as inexpert as possible for the service which the Government and the people require of them. Consequently their own risks would be increased.

A viperish periodical addicted to pacifism announced that in the week of the air maneuvers meetings of protest would be held in Chicago and New York. It listed as giving sympathy and support to the protest the following organizations: The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the Y. M. C. A., the League of Industrial Democracy, the Chicago Church Federation, the Workmen's Circle, the League of Nations Nonpartisan Association, the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Socialist party. The authority for the inclusion of all these organizations is not given by the periodical, but it presents them all as objecting to the operations.

Fortunately this case may be submitted to the common public opinion of the country in confidence that the average sanity will perceive the perversion of thought and sentiment in the pacifist mind. If the organizations which objected to the maneuvers had been successful in preventing the building of airplanes for military service and the training of young men to fly them the consequences would concern the country at large. But the objection to fitting the men in the service for the work necessary to it means that these men shall be the victims of a thing the country has ordained they shall do. In the lack of proper training the pacifists would find an offering acceptable to the throne of peace.

Such a state of mind would be regarded as peculiar in a madhouse, but it is typical of pacifist effort. It shows in the determination to stop the simplest of civilian preparation for possible military duty. This preparation is the very antidote a peaceable country offers for what is called militarism, the maintenance of a large force whose sole objective is war. A peace-loving nation tries to find civilian substitutes for the military systems of other countries. Out of bedlam comes the attack upon it.

A RELIGIOUS RAILROAD.

The world's strangest rail carrier, officially known as the Damascus-Medina-Hadj Railroad, according to the Wall Street Journal, is to be rebuilt. At any rate, a petition to that effect is before the king of Hejas. The road, which was destroyed during the World War, began in, traversed and ended in Near East deserts. It carried no freight and its only passengers were pilgrims going to or returning from "making the Hadj," the hope of every religious Mohammedan. The Moslems are still "making the Hadj" but by foot, and they have tired of the exhausting trek.

The railroad was ordered by the Sultan in 1908, paid for by the Mohammedans, designed by a German engineer, built by Italian, Polish, Hungarian, and Turk engineers using Italian, Greek, Turk and Montenegrin labor. Its rails were made in America, France and Belgium and its engines in Germany. In other words, while Christians built and equipped the road they are barred as passengers.

There's No Fun in Stealing Watermelons if the Boys Choose Your Patch

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THERE comes a time, in the history of every republic, when organized groups or factions use their political strength to raid the public treasury.

When that time comes, patriotism has given place to selfishness; respect for authority has disappeared; the people have lost their spiritual heritage, and the land is ripe for revolution and pillage.

To say that America is on the verge of ruin would be absurd, for the majority still retains its mental balance and its inherent decency; but the signs of decay are multiplying and disaster will come in due season unless those who possess civic pride and a sense of reponsibility exert themselves to restore the old standards of independence, decency and manhood.

Dependence on the public treasury is fatal. No other influence so quickly corrupts a people or so quickly destroys the pride of independent manhood.

It is a disease of the public mind—a contagious disease that soon becomes epidemic.

When one group makes a raid on the public funds, other groups condemn the practice and yet hasten to plan raids of their own.

"If the Treasury is to be robbed," they say, "we must get our share."

The raiders do not realize that they are taking from themselves. They get the money from the Government and the Government is a mysterious institution that seems always to have abundant funds.

No individual would ask for a Government appropriation of one thousand dollars if he knew that his taxes would be increased in like amount. He asks for an appropriation because he thinks the money will come from the pocket of some other tax payer.

Every group that demands money from the public Treasury does so with the understanding and belief that some other and richer group will have the bill to pay.

Reduced to simple terms, one group uses the power of Government forcibly to rob another.

Often the process is justified, as in the case of veterans wounded in the service of their country. In such cases it is not robbery, but an enforcement of simple justice.

But when veterans use their political power to procure pensions for the unhurt and undeserving, they rob others without any justification unshared by the bandit.

The one hope of discouraging such raids lies in a form of taxation that will place the burden on those who take the money.

Such poetic justice doubtless is impossible of attainment, but it can be approximated by means of discriminating sales tax.

The billion-dollar pension bill now dreaded as a probability would not materialize if veterans knew in advance that the money would be raised by means of a tax on tobacco.

What would it profit a man to get a pension of $30 a month if that sum sufficed only to pay the tax on 30 packs of cigarettes?

Democratic Prospects.

Atlanta Constitution.

Democratic leaders in high stations and influential in party action are making it more evident as time grows toward the national convention of 1932 that their efforts will be for a harmonious party in next year's campaign.

Whether or not the prohibition issue will figure in the deliberation of the convention remains to be seen. It will be difficult, if not impossible, to ignore the complete failure of the enforcement of the Volstead law. But this is a question that can be handled in a diplomatic way.

It is certain, however, that this will not be made the dominant issue of the campaign.

The big business of both parties next year will be to meet the demand of the great majority of the people for some legislative policy that will restore prosperous conditions througout the country, abolish preferences to special interests, make against any recurrence of present widespread unemployment, restore the lost markets of the farmers and other producers of the Nation, and put the Government back upon the Democratic principle of equal rights, equal opportunities and equal protection to all, with special privileges to no class, no trust, no monopoly and no purchasers of Federal favors.

Good-by.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Gov. White of Ohio is an outstanding Democrat. He might have had a chance to head the national ticket next year but for an unexpected misfortune. Heflin, of Alabama, has started a boom for him.

Diplomats and Their Liquor.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

It is one of the ironies of American politics that the severe injury of a foreign diplomat in Washington by burglars seeking his liquor should lead ardent drys to demand abolition of diplomatic immunity. After several such burglaries the Salvadorean Charge d'Affaires feels that police protection is inadequate, and one cannot blame him. Yet rabid reformers like Smith Brookhart use this as a pretext for taking away the diplomat's historic privilege of immunity.

The freedom of diplomatic agents from the law of the country to which they are assigned is founded in practical conditions of international relations. Unless he is immune from local jurisdiction his peculiar usefulness as an envoy is seriously impaired. It is fortunate that such immunity is woven solidly into the fabric of international law, for thus it is not open to the abrupt and thoughtless legislation of parliaments and congresses.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Strong Nation Armed Is in Best Position to Insist on Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of your correspondents, questioning whether "preparedness means peace," says: "Surely, to make preparations for war means either that we intend to break the terms of the peace pact or that we suspect other nations. If we must have an Army and Navy so large that other nations will be afraid to fight us, in that instance peace rests on the basis of fear, which is highly undesirable."

Peaceful as the dove's intentions may be, it is not safe from the cat's claws. Whether fully armed or supinely defenseless, the United States would remain the same peace-loving Nation. Americans have no imperialistic designs upon either neighbors or overseas possessions. Many instances within recent years substantiate this statement. On the other hand, to pretend that all the other nations of the world are imbued with the same motives and ideals is to be blind to plain facts.

The United States Army has been reduced to a prewar basis; European armies are greater than ever before in peace times. There are still some nations in the world that do not respect authority that is not based on strength and that have no qualms of conscience about acquiring property from the rich and defenseless.

The United States is the greatest force in the world today for peace, and it is largely so because of demonstrated strength in the World War. Our losses in comparison with the other participants were comparatively slight; it was the evidence of the effort we could develop that counted most. Our strength and disposition had not been believed; our influence for peace had been negligible until they had been demonstrated.

The same correspondent adds that the preparedness of European countries in former times had not resulted in peace. It did, however, prevent any one of the major powers from being overrun and absorbed by the others, as would surely have happened if one had endeavored to bring about peace by kind thoughts alone.

The hope for disarmament lies in a gradual, pro rata reduction of forces, so that suspicious neighbors will retain the same relative strength. It will take some time to reach the ultimate goal of complete inoffensiveness through complete disarmament. To attempt to secure it in a single step is an impractical dream. If the United States is to have a voice in the adoption of a rational program of successive reductions it can not adopt the role of light tenor in the concert of nations.

The plans of the War Policies Commission plainly points the way to maintaining both prestige and preparedness without the necessity of a large Army or heavy expenditure. To believe that the preparation of all the preliminary plans for war use in an emergency would make an aggressive, warlike people of the citizens of the United States is as unreasonable as to ignore the influence those plans would have in promoting American efforts for world peace. The strong nation demanding peace is heard with respect.

Suggestion for Detail of Proposed Flag for District of Columbia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My notion of a flag for the District of Columbia is that it should be of simple design, readily distinguishable from other flags. The design of Kenneth Reynolds in The Post of May 25, seems to meet that requirement.

I would, however, suggest a somewhat different reading of the flag's color scheme from that indicated.

Instead of having "the two outside bands of red represent the two Houses of Congress," I would let them stand, one for the Federal Congress and the other for the Federal Judiciary. Then the "blue center" might logically designate the Federal executive, with the central "white star" for the local device.

Some such design as this, symbolizing the Federal Government with its three constituent branches, should, it seems to me, distinguish the flag of the Federal District.

LAUGHTER

Who was the first man of the race
Upon this good old earth,
To find within some somber place
The bubbling springs of mirth.
The dawn of reason has been told,
On stone its signs appear,
But who in those dark days of old
Discovered laughter here?
Who was the very first to see
Beneath the ills men bore
And used to face so solemnly
That there was something more,
That fellow's name I'd like to know
With merriment endowed,
Who bumped his head or stubbed his toe
Then strangely laughed aloud.
Perhaps while blundering on his way
A crystal pool he neared
And saw himself that summer day
His face o'ergrown with beard,
"Am I what women love," cried he,
"Is that my handsome face?
If others see what now I see
This world's a funny place."
And thus began the merry jest
That lightens pain and care,
And sweetens the brief times of rest
Between the ills we bear.
Though nations rise and nations fall
'Tis well for me and you,
That men have learned to laugh at all
The foolish things they do.

DRY GROUPS ATTACK CLAIM OF RUM COST

Antisaloon League Declares Estimate Is Largely New Rap at Law.

(Associated Press.)

Two dry organizations yesterday took sharp issue with the estimate by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that the American people are spending $2,848,000,000 annually for intoxicating beverages.

The Antisaloon League called the estimate "wild speculation," adding "the figures are not based on any tangible facts but are a synthetic figure composed of one part guesswork and five parts desire to discredit prohibition."

The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church said neither the Association against the Prohibition Amendment nor any one else knew how much liquor was consumed in the United States, but there were many indications it was "very much less" than before prohibition.

Statement Termed Absurd.

"The absurdity of their statement," the Antisaloon League said, "is apparent from their use of the figures purporting to show per capita consumption of liquor when there are no facts available anywhere as a basis for these figures.

"Their own statement that 'most of the liquor now consumed is made at home or purchased from neighborhood bootleggers, shows clearly that they are merely guessing because obviously there is no record and can be none of the extent of this source of liquor supply.

Called Not Fair Basis.

"Enforcement statistics showing stills and liquor seized indicate efficiency of enforcement and are not a fair basis of estimates of consumption. Whatever the unknown quantity of liquor consumption may be, it is too much, and it would be much more under any other system.

"More important than the exact amount being spent, whatever it may be is the question of how to reduce the quantity of liquor consumed. If the vast publicity favorable to liquor were cut down the demand for intoxicants would naturally decrease. Also, if the voluble opposition to dry laws would subside, fewer people would be encouraged to drink."

Professors Meet Here To Plan for Rum Study

(Associated Press.)

The vanguard of a group of nine distinguished university professors, who will seek means by which college graduates can help solve the prohibition problem, gathered last night in the Capital.

With one addition, the group comprises the newly selected Prohibition Advisory Research Council. Behind closed doors in the Prohibition Bureau today it will begin a series of meetings designed, in the words of Prohibition Director Woodcock, to "formulate plans for research into the operation of the eighteenth amendment in the fields of sociology and political economy."

Prohibition Bureau officials undertook yesterday to clear up what they said were misunderstandings about the council. Its members will receive no compensation, they said, nor will their work be political or in any way comparable to that of the Wickersham commission.

Under present plans the eight men and one woman expected will be given a room to themselves, in which they can work out, without interference from any Federal officials, their plans for guiding graduate research. They will be addressed by Attorney General Mitchell.

Co. into involuntary bankruptcy included the Royal Indemnity Co. It was claimed that this concern agreed to guarantee payment of principal and bond interest up to $540,000 on deposit of securities having a value of not less than 5 per cent of that figure.

According to Associated Press reports, the petition declared the value of the securities had dropped from $27,000 to $4,000 and the mortgage company had declined to make further deposit.

The Portland petition was said to have stated that mortgages on hotels and business blocks in many cities failed to yield the company expected returns because of widespread decline in real estate values.

On April 23 the Department of Justice announced it had received a "flood of complaints" from stockholders of American Bond & Mortgage Co. and that it would conduct an investigation.

The Chicago Title & Trust Co. last week was appointed receiver for the American Bond & Mortgage Co. by a Chicago Federal judge simultaneously with appointment of temporary receivers for the Mayflower company here.

Osages Go on Warpath To Keep Rich Oil Lands

(Associated Press.)

The chief and tribal council of the Osage Indians met yesterday with Indian Commissioner Rhoads to lay plans for defending their continued right to Oklahoma oil lands, which so far have yielded them some $230,000,000.

The original act of Congress which reserved to the tribe mineral rights in 1,485,000 acres, whose surface was allotted to the Indians individually, expired in April. Present surface owners have brought suit to have the mineral rights turned over to them, contending another act of Congress, which extended the tribal ownership until 1958, was unconstitutional.

Bar Harbor And Newport Call Society

Several Hostesses of the Capital Responding to Beckons.

WITH the summer season in the offing, Newport and Bar Harbor, competitors for the favor of smart society throughout the East, beckon to a group from Washington. Several hostesses are already busy closing their homes here, preparatory to becoming established at one resort or the other for the summer season.

Mrs. John C. O'Donnell, who lives on Sixteenth street, has leased Miss Elizabeth L. Betton's villa on Gibbs avenue, Newport, for the season, and will leave June 1 to become established there. She has been a member of the Newport colony, as have other members of her family, for many summers. Her son, Mr. C. Oliver O'Donnell, of New York, has Gravel Court, the Lanier villa, for the season. Another son, Mr. John C. O'Donnell, also of New York, with Mrs. O'Donnell, will also occupy a cottage at the resort.

Mrs. Duncan Cameron and her daughters, Miss Elsie Quinby and Miss Phoebe Quinby, will be members of the Newport colony again this year. They have been spending several months abroad and Miss Phoebe Quinby plans to join her mother and sister, who are now bound for this country, in Newport in several weeks. She is lingering abroad for a visit in England.

Mrs. Henry F. Dimock will join the colony in Bar Harbor, which she has favored for many years. She has not, however, set any date for her departure from Washington, but in a month or so, it is safe to venture, her spacious home on Scott Circle will be closed for the season, and she will be established at the fashionable resort.

Mrs. James F. Mitchell will also go to Bar Harbor. She plans to make a flying visit there the end of this week to make arrangements for the season. She will have with her her daughter, Miss Eliza Mitchell, and son, Mr. Harry D. Mitchell, and for frequent visits her eldest son, Mr. James F. Mitchell, jr.

They were the guests of honor at a luncheon given Sunday by Mr. Arthur Williams at his home, Brooks Corner, Roslyn, Long Island. Sharing honors with the ambassador and his wife were the Brazilian Consul General in New York and Senora Sebastiano Sampaio.

Mr. Williams had the American and Brazilian flags flying in the court yards of Brooks Corners to greet his guests as they drove through the main entrance. During the afternoon there were motion pictures shown. Some of these included pictures taken of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison during the stay at Brooks Corners. Mr. Williams' guests also were entertained with a program of organ music given by Miss Antoinette Sherwood.

Mrs. E. E. Gann will motor to Fairfax Court House tomorrow to attend the Fairfax Garden Club's show and to be the guests of Mrs. Harley P. Wilson at the luncheon which will be given by the club at the home of Mrs. Walter Tansill Oliver. The Attorney General and Mrs. William Dwight Mitchell had as guests for several days the latter's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Bancroft, of St. Paul, Minn., who motored back to their home.

Mr. Bancroft's sister, Miss Gertrude Bancroft, who spent the winter with the Attorney General and Mrs. Mitchell, accompanied them back to St. Paul. The marriage of Miss Bancroft and Mr. Hubert Briand Holland, announced in Washington and St. Paul early in March, will take place in the latter city in midsummer.

Envoy Honors Day Argentina Won Freedom

Tennis Team Present; Barrymores to See Matches.

In celebration of the anniversary of the triumph of independence won by his country, the Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Dr. Don Manuel E. Malbran, invited to luncheon yesterday the members of the staff at the Embassy; the Argentine Counsul in Philadelphia, Senor Ernesto Uriburu, and the captain and two members of the Argentine tennis team in town for the competition matches for the championship of the American zone, Senor Edwin French, Senor William Robson and Senor Ronald Boyd.

In the afternoon the ambassador received his colleagues and families of the Diplomatic Corps and many friends and members of the Argentine colony.

Having wished, since their arrival in Washington, to extend hospitality to members of the tennis team, the ambassador's fete yesterday served as a delightful opportunity for introducing the youthful stars to diplomatic society. Senor Malbran and other members of the embassy staff, will witness the matches at the opening, Thursday.

Further glamour is added to the forthcoming Davic Cup tennis matches the last of this week at the Chevy Chase Club by the fact that Ethel Barrymore and her attractive daughter, Ethel Barrymore Colt, are planning to witness Friday's exhibition. Both ardent tennis fans, they will fly to Washington from New York in time for the matches. Miss Colt has already been in the Capital this week, having spent yesterday and Sunday here. They will probably stay at one of the hotels, although Miss Colt is an intimate friend of Miss Peggy Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Walsh, of Chevy Chase, and may elect to pay her a visit.

Ethel Barrymore and her daughter are close friends of Frank Shields, of the American team, and particular interest in seeing him play will bring them to Washington.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. William S. Sims are at the Weylin, in New York, having reached there yesterday from their home in Boston.

Mrs. James Irving Steel entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel in compliment to Miss Jean Stevenson, the newly elected president of the League of American Pen Women, and to Mrs. Estelle Moses, the retiring president of the organization.

Among the guests were Mrs. James Wickersham, wife of the delegate from Alaska, and Mrs. Edward A. Harriman.

Representative Ruth Bryan Owen is in Philadelphia, where she is visiting her son for a few days. Mrs. Owen will return to Washington early next week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Gibson are now at the Shoreham Hotel, where they have taken an apartment. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson have recently returned to the United States after a lengthy sojourn in Vivey, Switzerland.

Mrs. John Allan Grier, of Detroit, is a guest at the Mayflower with her daughter, Miss Dresden Grier, who attended Mount Vernon Seminary this season. Mrs. Grier is a graduate of Mount Vernon and is attending the annual alumnae reunion.

Miss Betty West Will See Devon Horse Show.

Miss Betty West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millard F. West, left yesterday for Philadelphia to visit Miss Katherine Lemley at Ardmore. Miss Lemley will entertain a house party for the Devon horse show. Miss West will return Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ash returned yesterday from the South, where Mr. Ash joined the latter a fortnight ago. Mrs. Ash has been for two months in Dallas, Tex., where she was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Edward White Luna, and upon Mr. Ash's arrival there they went then to New Orleans for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Crawforld Ellis.

Capt. Enochs Soon to Visit Washington

Recent Bridegroom's Ship Now in Philadelphia for Conditioning.

Born under a lucky star, "Buck" Enochs, registered in the Navy as John M. Enochs, captain of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, has garnered "unto himself" another well deserved honor, for within a short time his beloved ship will plough the seas as the flagship of the commander in chief of the United States Fleet, Admiral J. V. Chase, the order having gone out recently from the Navy Department.

Having just put in at the Navy shipyards in Philadelphia after a cruise in Southern waters, the Pennsylvania is being shaped into trim for the summer maneuvers and in the interim Capt. Enochs will have opportunity to run down to Washington for a visit with Mrs. Enochs and with friends here.

Named commander of the Pennsylvania only a short time after his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Shirley, of Washington, last winter Capt. Enochs' star of fortune has sparkled pretty steadily throughout his career. The wedding of the popular couple took place in Rio Janeiro, where Capt. Enochs was stationed as executive officer of the United States Naval Commission in Brazil. The captain is known through all the paths of the seven seas, from Riga to Shanghai, wherever the flag of his country waves, and Mrs. Enochs, also, has spent much of her life abroad, both speaking half a dozen languages and counting among their friends cosmopolites of many lands.

Yesterday Mrs. Enochs was the guest in whose honor Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau, gave a tea at her apartment at the Ontario.

At a charmingly arranged wedding last Sunday in Baltimore at the home of the officiating rabbi, the Rev. Dr. Samuel Rosenblatt, Miss Henrietta Luber, daughter of Mrs. Dora Luber, became the bride of Mr. Benjamin Kay, son of Mrs. Ida S. Kay, both of Washington.

The bride, who was attended by her mother, wore a gown of beige color chiffon and eggshell color hat and gloves. She carried a bouquet of pink tea roses and sweet peas. Immediately after the ceremony, a reception and dinner was given to the members of the respective families at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Kay left for an entended Northern motor trip to New York and Toronto.

They will be at home to their friends after July 15 at 4514 Conecticut avenue northwest.

Welcome and Farewell Given by Linebargers.

A welcome and farewell tea was given Sunday by Mrs. Paul Myron Linebarger, honoring the return of her son, Mr. Paul Myron Linebarger,

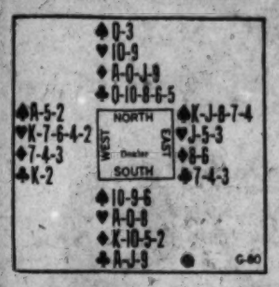
WORK ON BRIDGE

THE PERFECT FALSE CARD.



AT AUCTION Bridge South would call one No Trump on the above hand, and no one else would have a legitimate bid. North's No Trump support would be much too promising for a minor suit take-out.

The hand was played at fifteen tables of Duplicate Contract and the contract was the same at every table: South, with a count of 15, called one No Trump; North, with a count of 13, raised the No Trump to three.

In spite of North's and South's high combined count, an unfortunate distribution plus clever defense by West, brought disaster at fourteen of the fifteen tables. West led the Four of Hearts. North played the Nine, East the Jack, South the Queen. A Diamond lead was won by North's Ace, and the Club finesse lost to West's King. West knew that to lead a small Heart would give Declarer an extra trick, and to lead the King would stand an even chance of doing so. The King of Diamonds and the Ace of Clubs were marked in South's hand. The remaining possibility was the Spade suit and West led his Ace. When East played the Eight, West led Spades again. East and West won five Spades and a Club, setting the contract two tricks. A small Spade led by West to trick 4 would have accomplished the same result.

At one table, however, the Declarer realized that game was safe unless West won the necessary Club finesse and then led a Spade. Since East and West held eight Spades in their combined hands, this switch was likely and surely would let the contract. So South, on the very first trick, made it tempting for West to continue Hearts. He played the Ace, not the Queen of Hearts on East's Jack; a false card which could do no harm and might make West think that East held the Queen. When West secured the lead with the King of Clubs at trick 3, he led a small Heart. Declarer won four tricks in Clubs, four in Diamonds and two in Hearts—one above his contract.

Dare Interprets the Mode

A picturesque bridesmaid's gown in pastel colored silk organdie with many unusual features. (A Dah-ray design.)

New York, May 25.

IT'S a fact—this quaint old custom of getting married, doesn't seem to change, as the years go by. What does change the gown for a spring bride? Of course, I'm talking of the formal bridal costume, complete with veil and train and "orange blossoms" and not just what you wear when you go to "City Hall."

Though the classic all-white outfit either of wedding ring satin or the wonderfull kind of satin that has no shine and stands alone still continues to appeal to most romantic young brides, there have been some daring and sensational innovations. Such as the pale cold-blue taffeta that one ash blonde bride wore recently or the pink satin, very pale pink, of course; or even the very faint yellow satin with a girdle of solid gold links descending way below the knees that another exotic young lady chose to be married in.

At one of the very smartest of spring weddings the bridesmaids and the bride were all dressed in exactly the same style of dress—white satin and the only way you could distinguish the bride, besides the fact that she was the one getting married, is that she wore a veil.

There are all kinds of variations to the conventional bouquet of flowers or the crown of orange blossoms. With a medieval type of dress with square neckline and long crushed sleeves and long shirred bodice from which the fullness of the skirt starts, I saw a girdle of real orange blossoms that descended to the floor on one side. And Lanvin uses no flowers at all with one of her gowns. A cap, loosely woven or bands of silver lame with a gossamer tulle veile hanging from it in the front, is the headdress and it matches a flaring peplum also made of woven bands of the lame on the white satin dress.

And an extremely charming and chic variation to the conventional bouquets of the bridesmaids is the tiny muffs all made of flowers.

* * * *

And how about the bridesmaid? The artistic bride wants her bridesmaids to be, well, almost as lovely as she is, and since it is the bride who usually selects their frocks, I have just designed a Dahray bridesmaid for you today. This frock is of that lovely silk organdie, and can be in any pastel shade that you choose. The bows might, if you are ever so careful and clever, be in a contrasting color, and in satin, and if you decide on that, the large hat must be the color of the bows in preference to the color of the frock. And it must be cut just that way, too, all on one side and nothing on the other, which is, as you know, the mode.

Then the skirt must owe its fullness to the panels that flare out sharply on either side, and to nothing else—and there must be no sleeves on the upper arm, and one's underslips must be georgette and lace, and more than hint at what the pretty lady looks like below the knees. And thus, my dahrlings, we will have the loveliest bridesmaids that any one ever had!

Just the most annoying thing in the world is to have a bag pull loose from a bag top—and it does seem to be hopeless to have them mended too, now doesn't it when they pull loose again so soon? I had a gray alligator bag on an exquisite top. 'n' I didn't fill it a bit full, either, but it came loose just the same, and just about broke my heart! It gave me an idea, though, and I scouted around in little shops and in big department stores, and I found that there were tops that wouldn't come off for the very simple reason—but that's my surprise this week that is explained in detail in my leaflet. Better hurry and send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this leaflet, because, not only does it explain my discovery, but it tells you how to make lots 'n' lots of the darlingest bags you ever saw! You'll adore them!

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

An Unnatural Mode.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am 27 years old, and people say I look much younger. How true that is I don't know. I'm not beautiful, but then I'm not an eyesore, either. My trouble is monotony. I work all day, come home and read all evening, excepting school nights. I'm studying stenography. This has gone on for three years, and I really can't stand it much longer. It makes one so stupid never to do anything that makes life interesting. I didn't mind it so much at first, but it's sort of getting me now. It's making me lose all the little confidence I once had in myself. I'm so self-conscious I make myself miserable most of the time, always thinking what the other fellow is thinking of me. I'm even that way at work except for the few close friends I have. It has come to the point that I even lie about dates so the other girls won't think me funny. I want so much to be like other girls, and have boy friends to take me to shows, dances and things. I love hiking and swimming, so you see I'm not a gold digger, for I do like things that don't always cost money. I want company; I'm terribly lonely all of the time. Books, movies, plays all have this love interest, two and two always, but I'm just always alone.

Would you please tell me how to overcome this self-consciousness and be natural, so folks will like me, and also how to go about meeting men of my age? I don't want boys. I would like to get married and have children and a home. I want my children before I'm too old to enjoy them.

Please send me a personal answer and don't publish my name, for I wouldn't want any one to know that I've written this letter. It would be a great joke to them and such a tragedy to me.

Thank you so much for any interest you may have in this letter.

P. S. I have lived alone in a room since I was 17 years old, eating all my meals out. MARGARET.

My dear child, 10 years in a hotel room with solitary meals would make anybody become shy of human kind! How did you ever come to select such a mode of existence? Now here is what you are about to do at once. Look up the ads and find a boarding house. Go to one after the other, taking dinner at each one first to judge of the meals and the people. This town has so many strangers within its gates, you will find it hard to escape making friends if you will just go where these strangers are. No one is going up to a nice girl in a restaurant and enter into conversation with her, you know. But in a boarding house everybody talks to everybody else—too much sometimes!

At first you will feel strange, of course. For a week or two and after that you will wonder how you ever remained a prisoner in a hotel room for 10 years. You will forget how to talk if you do not change your mode of life at once. I recall how I dreaded the thought of going to a boarding house when I went to New York to seek my fortune. Boarding houses and poor houses were near kin in my mind. That was my youthful ignorance. I dined at several. Then up near Riverside Drive I found just the place. A pretty woman who sang. She took pride in her business. I loved the dining room. And changed my mind about boarding houses being cousins to poor houses. Every one chatting with every one else. Everyone cheery and glad to be home. I immediately selected a tiny room—and spent some of the happiest hours of my life there arguing on every subject under heaven over well-cooked dinners that would shame many of the high priced meals I have eaten since. And of course there were cute men always taking walks after dinner that ended at the movies and always begging someone to go along.

You start now to live a natural life. In a month you will not know yourself. Buy all the papers tonight and scan all the boarding ads. It is great fun and a liberal education. I wish I were in your shoes! I would get the greatest thrill in the world out of my search for adventure. Get started.

YOUR NAME

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Abercrombie" is of Scottish origin. It generally indicates an original place of residence in Abercrombie, Fife. This place-name is of Celtic origin, and may be translated "the mouth of the River Crombie." "Crombie" is based on the Celtic adjective "crom," meaning "crooked" and "bending." Therefore the full significance of "Abercrombie" as a family name is "he who lives at the mouth of the crooked river."

The family name "Ruth" is especially common in Germany. It may be traced back to two different old Nourse sources according to which it means "the famous man" and "the red-haired man." The name also occurs in early English and Irish records. In the Domesday Book (1086) it is found with the spelling "Rot." A certain Robert Rot de Kilkudbricht was a member of the Dublin Guild-Merchant in 1226. The commonest forms of this family name in Ireland at the present time are "Ruth," "Routh" and "Route." The family name "Ruth" is wholly different in origin and meaning from the personal name which is pronounced in the same way in English.

The personal name "Ruth" is of Hebrew origin. There is some uncertainty as to its original meaning, but most authorities now agree that it means "beauty."

The family name "Lenehan" (also spelled "Lenahan," "Lenihan," &c.) has come down to us from two Irish sources. When it is derived from "O Leanachain" it means "the descendant of Leanachan." The personal name "Leanachan" is a diminutive form of "Leannach," which means "the man who wears the cloak." Sometimes the above-mentioned family names may be tracked back to "O Luingeachain," which means "the descendant of little Longach." The personal name "Longach" may be translated "the man of the boat" or "the man of the camp."

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

PLEASE tell me how to grow rosebushes. Must they be rooted in sand or soil, and how long must I make each slip. C. F. J.

Choose such shoots as are ready to open their buds. If the stems are over five inches long, you can usually make two cuttings from one stem Remove all but the top leaf. Insert cutting deeply into a box of sand or soil. Keep soil quite damp while cutting is rooting. If rooted in sand, transplant to soil when you are sure it is rooted. Plant young rose in good, rich soil in the sun.

Please tell me what to do for a pink hydrangea. When I first came into possession of the plant I set it in the open ground, where it did not do well. It bloomed, but the leaves would dry up. I have it in a large pot and it is beginning to make growth, not as much, however, as I would like. What would you advise? MRS. B. F.

Keep the pot always in the sun and water it both at the top and root once every day except when the weather is unusually hot, in which case it should be watered twice each day. You must give it enough at each application to wet all the soil in the pot thoroughly. You must also give it some bonemeal or liquid manure at this time. It will not do much until it recovers from two moves. Moving any plant checks its growth for a few weeks.

Please tell me when to prune my lilac bush. The bush in question is very large and twenty years old. Also what about some white lilacs which I am attempting to grow as a hedge; these plants grow tall, but not bushy. E. A. C.

Lilacs bloom from the topmost buds and to encourage growth of the individual twigs should be pruned after flowering only by removing the older wood and the suckers at the base of the plant. Constant pruning will cause the bushes to send out side shoots and thus become more bushy.

Please tell me how to care for a cyclamen during July and August. MRS. R. W.

Your cyclamen should now be resting. In April or late March, when it had finished flowering, you should have gradually ceased watering it, then set the pot aside. From April 1 until late August or early September it must have no water. About Labor day bring the pot to the light, remove the dead tops and begin to water it regularly. You will soon see signs of life. Florists grow young plants each year for the market, but this does not mean that a cyclamen cannot be kept over from year to year.

Please tell me when to plant my Easter lily bulbs outside. I followed your advice and the bulbs should now be ready for the open. MRS. PHOEBE H. P.

Plant them at once, choosing a sunny place where the soil is rich.

I have a clematis paniculata which I want to bloom better this year than it did last year. Would it be right to give it some liquid manure at this time? Also, will the grass, coming close to the roots, injure it at all? ELLA H. P.

Give the vine liquid manure at once but keep the grass from encroaching on its territory. You see the grass when growing close to the roots absorbs some of its nourishment.

What Today Means to You

"GEMINI."

IF May 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to noon, from 3:15 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 10:10 p. m. The danger hours are from 12:45 p. m. to 2:50 p. m. and from 5:45 p. m. to 7:35 p. m.

Unexpected reverses and losses are foreshadowed by the planetary aspects of May 26. There is also indicated danger of accidents. Clear thinking and excessive caution are essential. The evening conditions will be of a more assuring nature and beget confidence.

Children born on this May 26 will be peculiarly sensitive to their surroundings. They will often become morbid and melancholy, if left to their own devices. They must be forced to mix freely with their fellows, so that they will overcome this handicap and have an equal chance with others.

You, if born on May 26, are unyielding in your determination, and are often called stiff-necked when, however, love enters your life, you are very easily influenced by the person who arouses the affection of your nature. You possess great endurance, both physical and mental, and can stand a severe strain better than the average person.

You are extremely sociable and affable, and are never happier than when entertaining your friends or those for whom you care. Adaptability is one of your assets, and you can adequately fill any role on life's stage that the whirligig of time may call upon you to play.

Largely governed by your emotions and sensations, you will experience many infatuations, each one of which will, at the time, be looked upon by you as the real thing. The divinity that shapes your ends will save you from unfortunate commitments, and your horoscope indicates, when you marry, a real love-match. You are a clean fighter and an honorable opponent. You may, as a result of your openness, be "knocked down," but you will never be "knocked out."

3 VIE FOR HIGHEST ANNAPOLIS HONORS

Distinction May Be Won by Man From Outside Continental U. S.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 25.—With all examinations completed and instructors in the several academic departments now engaged in marking papers, the competition for first honors of the class of midshipmen to be graduated from the Naval Academy on June 4 had resolved itself into a three-cornered race, with prospect that for the first time the distinction may go to an appointee from outside continental United States, according to officials of the institution.

The probable "honor" man is Horatio Rivero, of Porto Rico, who has been coxswain of the varsity crew for the last two years. Rivero's closest rivals are Alexander C. Veazey, Atlantic City, N. J., and Tom D. Tyra, St. Paul, Minn. The merit roll of the class probably will not be made known until Friday.

Less Than Three Points.

The results of examinations at the close of the regular term last June showed that less than 3 points separated the three contenders, all of whom have been exceptional students throughout the four-year course. The multiple of the three at that time was Rivero, 273.10; Veazey, 271.97; Tyra, 250.89.

The class as a whole has made a fine scholastic record. This is borne out by the prospects that 30 or more will graduate with "star" rating. That is, having received 85 per cent or better of the multiple for the whole course. Forty were holding such a rating last June.

Six midshipmen of the graduating class have been selected by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent, to receive commendatory letters for general efficiency. Such letters are regarded as signal honors, the selections being those whom the superintendent regards as having contributed most by their officer-like qualities and positive characters to the development of naval spirit and loyalty within the regiment, in laying a foundation upon which to build a service reputation for ability.

To Be Presented June 3.

Copies of the letters are placed on the official records of the Navy Department. Those who will receive them are Alexander C. Veazey, Atlantic City, N. J.; Roy L. Taylor, Battle Creek, Mich.; Horace D. Moulton, Sabetha, Kans.; Ernest C. Holtzworth, Huntington, W. Va.; Raymond P. Hunter, Sherman, Tex., and Theodore A. Torgerson, Oklee, Minn.

Presentation of the letters will take place at dress parade June 3, when other awards and prizes will be distributed.

For the same accomplishments upon which the letter awards are based, Maurice W. Hubschman, Seattle, Wash., will be awarded the sword offered annually by the class of 1897, and his name will also be inscribed on the cup presented by that class. Hubschman has been cadet commander of the regiment through the academic year, at the beginning of which he was presented with a sword by the class of 1879.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT must be a rather keen satisfaction to Clayton Hamilton, one of the theater's most ardent advocates, to observe with what success one of his pet theories has worked out.

Several years ago it was that I heard Mr. Hamilton outline for the first time his scheme of assuring worthy theatrical productions profitable patronage when they ventured to doubtful precincts remote from New York. Perhaps you have heard it referred to as "the road." It was his thought that in every community there were a fixed number of lovers of the best in drama who would support attractions which they knew to be worthy. All that was necesary was to secure some sort of pledge from the drama lover to attend the worthy plays when they came along.

I am not prepared to say that this was the genesis of the Theater Guild or of the Professional Players or of any other organization relying upon the subscription plan to insure a sufficient degree to support to justify the production of plays and sending them on tour. But the principle is the same. And not only that, but, as has been pointed out in this department before, it is spreading to such an extent as to promise something of a rehabilitation of a "road" that has up to now been considered virtually defunct.

The great advantage of the scheme is that it seems to have taken the gamble out of show business to a very large extent for both the producer and the patron. The producer is assured of a fair audience; the audience of a better than fair entertainment.

As I remember it, that is all Mr. Hamilton had in mind years ago when the idea seemed so radical as to be almost fantastic. All of which is beside the point that by every omen and portent "the road" is coming back, along with vaudeville and minstrelsy.

Or maybe it's only 1932 politics!

As was remarked here only a few days ago in another connection, most of us think it would be pretty swell if we could be paid handsomely for doing nothing—or thereabouts. Yet Arnold Grazer, who has been paid for just that for the past four years or so, finds it a pretty tough job.

Grazer is the man who looks like a silver statue for some 23 minutes during the progress of "The Dance" Idea, at the Fox this week. To all appearances he is an inert, lifeless figure, standing there with spear upraised in the best gladiatorial manner, as Mr. Waite so aptly phrases it.

All this he is, but not without effort. He has to steel himself, to mix a few metals along with our metaphors, to be a silver gladiator. He has to breathe so unobtrusively as not to destroy the mineralogical illusion he creates. He can't bat an eye for fear some smart kid in the front row will discover him in the surreptitious act. That's doing nothing with a vengeance, and finding it deucedly hard and exhausting work. Of course, at the end of 23 minutes Mr. Grazer can relax and go into his dance—and it is quite a dance, at that.

Grazer, who has been doing this sort of thing for a considerable period has been seen in Washington numerous times before and is proud that one of his most ardent admirers was the late Woodrow Wilson, while occupant of the White House.

Doctors have warned Mr. Grazer that the constant application of the silver paint will kill him in time. This he takes with a grain of salt. For one thing, he has developed his own preparation of glycerine, castor oil and silver powder, which he thinks not very damaging. The coating is applied immediately before going on and removed immediately after coming off. Then, too, he spends four or five months a year at the beaches letting Old Sol melt it out of his system.

So far, Mr. Grazer does not agree with the economists in the matter of the decline of silver, although he finds the question something of a poser!

Happening upon Maurice Davis on one of our busiest thoroughfares yesterday afternoon, I was surprised to be reminded that this foremost of Georgetown's motion picture exhibitors, and one of the veterans among the independents, is about to celebrate the twenty-second anniversary of his entrance into the business of purveying shadow drama to the multitudes for gain.

In 22 years, believe it or not, Mr. Davis has seen a few changes in the industry and has his own ideas as to what ails it at the present moment—if anything. It is his theory that motion pictures started out to be the poor man's entertainment and flourished as long as they remained such. The trouble has come in direct ratio to the distance the cinema has moved out of the range of the poor man's purchasing power.

This will take some thinking over, for I have never known Maurice to be very wrong very often.

By the way, bachelor that I am, I answered the Parents' Magazine's test questions for daddies and got them 95 per cent correct. What a father!

Brookhart Draws Bill For War Capital Draft

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to authorize the Government to conscript industries and business enterprises in time of war was drafted yesterday by Senator Brookhart, (Republican), Iowa, for introduction in the next Congress. Brookhart's bill would provide that the Government pay to the owners of conscripted property 1 1-3 per cent upon their capital investments.

The Iowan also would impose, in time of war, an income tax of 75 per cent upon net incomes of $100,000 and less and would tax all incomes above $100,000, 100 per cent. He would restrict the profits of industries which are not conscripted to 1 1-3 per cent upon their capital investments.

Annulment Suit Is Filed.

A petition asking that his marriage in January, 1926, to Miss Verna V. Gray be annulled on the grounds of prenuptial fraud was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by John S. Wessells. The husband declared that his wife's present whereabouts is unknown.

DISTRICT SEAL HELD SUITABLE FOR FLAG

Many Contestants Suggest This as Center for Design to Be Selected.

Response to the efforts being made by The Washington Post in securing a suitable design for a flag for the District of Columbia is very gratifying. Many excellent suggestions and drawings are being received daily.

The question has arisen as to why the seal approved for the District should not be the appropriate center design of the emblem. State seals are used in the majority of cases for State flags and the opinion expressed is that the District seal should be the design used for the District of Columbia flag.

Many contestants are suggesting the use of a picture of George Washington, due to the fact that the city was named for him. This, however, has elicited an objection, namely, that the flag for the State of Washington bears the State seal, which is very simple in design, consisting of a picture of George Washington. The thought expressed was that confusion would arise in the minds of people, not absolutely familiar with the two flags, should one be adopted for the District of Columbia bearing a picture of George Washington.

So it can be seen that there are any number of reasons why residents of Washington should submit their suggestions for the flag to be adopted by the judges. And there is no limit to the number of designs which may be sent in by any one person to the Flag Contest Editor of The Washington Post. Every one is eligible to compete for the $25 prize being offered for the design selected in the flag contest.

Make your drawings with pen and ink so that they may be reproduced in the columns of The Post and describe the color combination in an accompanying letter.

Roosevelt Continues Conferences in City

Gov. Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico yesterday continued his conferences with Government officials concerning island affairs. He conferred during the week-end with President Hoover at the latter's Rapidan camp.

He came to this country primarily, however, to discuss business projects with a group in New York. He expects to be in Washington for the remainder of the week and then go to New York. He will return to Porto Rico late in June.

Mr. Gardner F. Johnson,
Evening Star Building, City.

My dear Mr. Johnson:

I am very much interested in the success of the campaign you are conducting in the interest of Washington-Baked Union-Made Bread. I think that our Washington bread is just about the best obtainable, and we must do everything possible to keep it up to the present standard.

During the past year as President of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, it has been my very great privilege to visit a number of our local bakeries, personally inspecting every department and watching the various processes through which the bread passed from the time it left the mixing room until it came out of the ovens, then cooled, wrapped and ready for delivery. I found it intensely interesting and instructive.

I was particularly impressed with the cleanly conditions under which it was made. This, you know is a most important factor from a woman's viewpoint, and is the strongest possible reason for our insisting upon not only our bread, but all our other bakery products as well, being made right here in Washington where these excellent conditions prevail.

I feel that I but voice the sincere desire of every woman in Washington who has the interest of her home at heart in wishing you every possible success.

Sincerely yours,

Katharine S. Meritt.

(Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt) President
District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

After visiting a Number of Washington Bakeries and observing the cleanly conditions under which Locally Made, Union Baked Bread is produced, writes as follows:

"The women of Washington should insist upon not only our bread, but all our other bakery products being made right here in Washington where these excellent conditions prevail."

Mrs. Meritt's tribute to the quality of our locally made bakery products is a distinct tribute to the skill of our UNION BAKERS. The men employed in our Washington Bakeries are thoroughly experienced in the art of baking fine breads and other bakery products. They appreciate this compliment.

We wish to publicly thank Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt for her splendid letter, and to express our keen appreciation for the spirit of cooperation pledged us by the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

LOOK FOR THE BAKERY ADDRESS!

It's there . . . somewhere on the wrapper of every loaf of bread you buy. Make sure it is the name AND ADDRESS of a Washington bakery. Then you know that bread was made from the finest ingredients under the most ideal conditions . . . mixed and baked by professional UNION BAKERS. Then you are both

HUNDREDS PLEASED WITH LOTS ON RIVER

Those Who Delay in Getting Beach Tracts May Be "Left in Cold."

All the visitors at Woodland Beach Sunday without their pocketbooks and checkbooks made up for their oversight yesterday by dropping into The Post and selecting lots for their future summer homes on the South River.

Of course, there were hundreds of others who came in to take advantage of The Post's great offer, but those who had been on the scene Sunday were especially impressed with the great value offered and the possible advantages of living in a community like Woodland Beach.

The response to the first announcements of the Woodland Beach development has been far greater than had been expected and the sale of lots has been most gratifying, both to The Post and to the purchasers. Every one who has visited Woodland Beach has been impressed with its beauty, its pleasant location on the South River and its opportunities for bathing, boating and fishing, three popular summer sports.

In case you are reading about Woodland Beach for the first time, it is just 32 miles from Washington, located on two coves of the South River, in Maryland. To reach it by motor take the Defense highway toward Annapolis, turning right at Camp Parole onto Maryland State highway No. 2, across the South River Bridge, and then left onto Mayo road, following that highway to the site. By traction line, take the W., B. & A. car to Camp Parole, and on Sunday buses will transfer passengers to the beach site and return them to the cars.

Obtaining a lot at Woodland Beach is the easiest thing imaginable. All that is necessary is to walk into The Post, subscribe to the paper and pay $9 in cash for your lot. The remainder of the $93 purchase price for the lot (and all are priced alike) may be paid in monthly installments of $3.50.

So attractive is this offer that hundreds of lots have been sold and an excellent representative community of Capital residents is rapidly taking shape. You and your neighbors will enjoy Woodland Beach if you take advantage of this offer now.

There are many choice lots still on the market, but at the rate they are being purchased those who delay too long may find themselves "left in the cold."

Call National 4205 when you place a Post Classified Ad.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

GLAUCOMA.

THE most important of all eye diseases is glaucoma. It causes more blindness than a cataract and far more than gonococcal infections. It is important because it usually gets people in the period when they are active and doing the day's work. Cataract comes near limiting its field to those who have quit or are about ready to do so. And, as a further consideration, chronic glaucoma develops slowly and is curable for a long time in this developing period. If a person in whom chronic glaucoma is developing will seek treatment within the first year after the onset of symptoms he should escape blindness.

The symptoms which may mean early glaucoma are temporary haziness of vision, seeing rainbow rings around lights at night, difficulty in reading, the necessity of a rapid increase in the strength of one's glasses. If a person notices that he has these symptoms the next step is to make a test on himself.

He closes one eye and fixes the vision of the other steadily on a given point. Next, he brings his finger in front of his face, say eighteen inches, and moves it up and down on the nose side of the range of vision. If glaucoma is developing he will find that he is blind on the nose side of his field of vision. This blind area is likely to have the shape of a small cut of pie. He may find that the point of this cut reaches to the center of the vision field.

About this time another "home consumption" may be noticed. It is a pain in the eyeball. If these symptoms are present the next step is to visit an eye doctor for an examination for glaucoma. This consists in making three tests. The field of vision is accurately mapped out, the physician does more closely what the patient did for himself in a rough way. The tension of the eyeball is measured with an instrument for that purpose, called a tonometer.

The retina is examined with an ophthalmoscope to discover whether there is cupping of the head of the optic nerve. If a diagnosis of glaucoma is made treatment should not be delayed. In some cases operation is done. In others, drops are used in the eye. If a cause can be found it is removed or avoided.

Dr. George S. Derby, who spoke on this subject at the annual meeting of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, thinks we will never make much headway in the control of glaucoma until the people know more about the early signs which should make one suspect the disease. He also thinks physicians should know better what symptoms point the way. This address develops around this conviction: If discovered in the early stages, glaucoma can almost always be controlled, and even when it is fairly advanced much can be done to prolong eyesight.

REDUCING EXERCISE

D. V. M. writes: Please answer whether any bending or twisting exercises to reduce the hips and waist are harmful to the kidneys. I have been doing these exercises for the last two weeks and have a pain in my back where, I assume, my kidneys are. A few years ago I had a slight case of kidney trouble which has not bothered me since. These exercises never bothered me two years ago when I was doing them to reduce.

REPLY.

The answer to your question is, No. There is much in the back region besides kidneys. Of all the inhabitants of that region the kidneys are least complaining. They scarcely know how to feel pain. But your back muscles and the joints in your backbone are different; they have a voice, and they like to yell. My guess is you will find these structures the seat of your pain.

$1,000 FOR ONE IDEA IS POST AD PROMISE

Only One Can Win but Equal Chance Is Open to All for Fat Check.

You ad writers in the seventh week of the Post-Zain Ad Writing Contest have the greatest of opportunities to be a winner. A $1,000 check, which will be drawn on the Federal American National Bank & Trust Co., is waiting for your idea. Think of it, $1,000 for one idea! All you need to do is submit many ideas in forms of ads, and the more you write the better you will be able to express your idea, and each ad you write will give you that many more chances to capture the grand award.

Here are a few tips that may help you "oil up your think tanks," grease your "idea gears" and write the prize-winning ad.

The Federal American National Bank & Trust Co. lends itself to excellent ad writing because of its uniquely different atmosphere. The interior, instead of being constructed of marble, is done in wood, which accentuates the warm friendly atmosphere. Remember, it is the department store of finance, being not only a savings bank and trust company, but its services also covering first mortgage loans and ranging from the renting of a safety deposit box to administering an estate.

In your ads about Emile, Inc., feature its many departments. Remember, the house of Emile is nationally famous, Mr. Emile being the first to introduce to Washington and the third to introduce to America permanent waving. Writing ads about Emile, Inc., should be easy. Write more of them.

Of course, write about complete heating service when you write about L. P. Steuart & Bro. It isn't the coal and oil they supply that makes them Washington's largest complete heating service firm, but the expert service they give.

No matter what your occupation be prepared the "Boyd" way. This school not only trains you but is also able to place you in the right position. The Boyd Business University and Boyd Employment Agency are excellent subjects.

Write the $1,000 prize-winning ad about Barber & Ross, Inc. What to write about? The ABC Washer and Conlon Ironer, of course. Explain why every home should be equipped with these superior washers and ironers. The more ads you write about this concern the easier you are going to find winning that $1,000 grand prize.

Be sure you write about those fine tailored suits priced as low as $65 and $75 in the new young men's tailoring department of the J. M. Stein & Co. The only way to properly write that $1,000 prize-winning ad about this firm is to see and appreciate the fine domestic materials and the imports used to make up these suits.

Because of error, names of winners to whom The Washington Post was awarding prizes for having written ads about the Merchants Transfer & Storage Co. were omitted in the list of 280 winners which appeared in The Sunday Post. These prize-winning names follow:

Florence Lyons Berry, 4516 Eighth street northwest; Mrs. H. B. Stickley, 905 Latterner avenue, Clarendon, Va.; Milton H. Cheyne, 1468 Harvard street northwest; Mrs. J. W. Zimmerman, 1789 Lanier place northwest; J. A. Wine, East Falls Church, Va.; R. H. Bleam, 219 E street northwest; Mrs. Samuel E. Spearshot, 2145 K street northwest; Mrs. John P. Davenport, Apartment 706, the Monmouth Hotel.

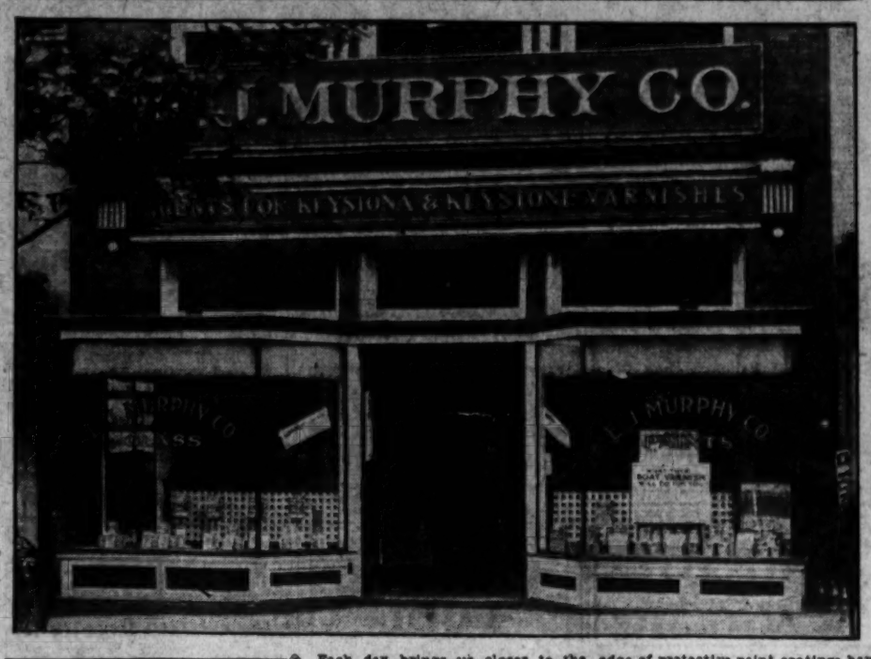
AD ON MURCO PAINT WINS PRIZE IN CONTEST



Each day brings us closer to the end of The Post-Zain Advertising Contest. Here are a few tips on what to incorporate in your ads about the E. J. Murphy Co., Inc., to win that $1,000 grand prize. Feature their glass and paint departments. Here is a prize winning ad about the E. J. Murphy Co. that might help you get the $1,000 idea.

PAINTING FOR PROTECTION.

When the Old Master Painter is called to repaint your home, he says "give it 2 or 3 coats of lead paint." His years of experience and knowledge of protective paint coatings have taught him that there is no better way to paint a house, to properly preserve it, and leave a firm foundation for future paintings, than to use lead paint.

Murco House Paint is made as a Master Painter would make it. Finely ground lead, colors, proper amounts of linseed oil, turpentine and driers. When your house is in need of repainting, be guided by the knowledge and experience of the Old Master Painter and use Murco 100 per cent Pure House Paint. Ask us for color cards and suggestions.

Know the truth

before accepting substitutes for Kotex

DON'T be confused by the careless expression, "just like Kotex." Perhaps the substitute looks the same. But demand to know more. Where was this substitute made? By whom? How? Who stands back of it? Is it hygienically safe . . . the kind of sanitary pad a hospital would select?

Last year more than 10,000,000 Kotex pads were used in hospitals. This is the pad that meets hospital requirements! You should be equally strict in selecting an accessory so definitely related to health. Insist on Kotex. It's the world's standard. In addition, Kotex is supremely comfortable. Shaped to fit. Soft—and stays soft. Adjustable. May be worn on either side.

Exchange to Admit Investment Trusts

New York, May 25 ((A.P.).—Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said today that there is reason to believe that a large proportion of the fixed Investment Trusts seeking to qualify under the new stock exchange rules would be successful.

Mr. Whitney issued a statement in which he said that the exchange's recent announcement of regulations under which members might associate themselves with fixed trusts appears to have been widely misinterpreted.

"Amoco-Gas brings out all that is best in Pierce-Arrow cars"

says MR. LEE D. BUTLER
President, LEE D. BUTLER, Inc.
PIERCE-ARROW Distributor

MR. LEE D. BUTLER

Mr. Butler is in his early thirties with an active and interesting record behind him. A B. A. and M. A. degree and a year of teaching at Princeton University. Service with the A. E. F. in France and later relief work in many European countries. And, finally, nine years of association with the Automobile industry. An enthusiastic mountain climber, he has many difficult ascents in the Rockies and Switzerland to his credit. He is a member of the Riding and Hunt Club, and is as enthusiastic about his five-year old hunter Skylark as he is over the performance of the latest Pierce-Arrow.

Mr. Lee D. Butler is one of the best-known men in automotive circles in Washington—and has met with noteworthy success in the sale of Pierce-Arrow motor cars.

Selling a car of so high quality as the Pierce-Arrow, the choice of the right motor fuel is naturally an important matter to Mr. Butler and to his organization.

His choice is Amoco-Gas, the original special motor fuel. He has found that Amoco-Gas gives the best possible results in his personal car, in Pierce-Arrow demonstrators, and in the cars of Pierce-Arrow owners.

That's why Mr. Butler recommends Amoco-Gas—for better performance, greater economy and superior all-round service.

—Pulitzer Prize Novel—

YEARS OF GRACE

By MARGARET AYER BARNES

SYNOPSIS.

Muriel Lester and Bert Lancaster are married with a large church wedding, at which Jane and Flora are bridesmaids. The bridal couple leave for their honeymoon, and everyone comments on the fact that Mrs. Furness had stayed away. Next morning, Jane comes down to breakfast and hears that Lily Furness has killed herself. She goes at once to Flora's house to try to comfort her.

STEPHEN—CHAPTER IV.

JANE sat beside Flora on the little rosewood sofa in Mrs. Furness' bedroom. They were listing the contents of the bureau drawers. That morning they had gone through the closets. Mrs. Furness' wardrobe was heaped in four great piles on the big rosewood bed. It had been a very hard morning for Flora. It had been a very hard one for Jane. Jane could remember just how Mrs. Furness had looked in nearly every gown that they had examined. She could see her dancing at Flora's debut in the violet velvet. She knew just how the black lace ruff of the little silk shoulder cape had framed her white face, while Mr. Bert Lancaster was talking to Muriel in the dining room at the coming-out tea.

Muriel and Mr. Bert Lancaster were still in the Canadian Rockies. Muriel had written at once to Flora. Jane had seen the letter. Muriel wasn't much of a letter writer, but you could read between the inarticulate, straggling lines that she was really awfully sorry. Muriel wrote just the way she did when she was a little girl at Miss Milgrim's. It made both Jane and Flora think of their school compositions to read her round child-like hand.

The Western sun was slanting in the bedroom windows. Their task was nearly finished.

To Close House for Year.

The room was quite dismantled. The window curtains were down and the carpet was up and all the little ornaments were put away. Mr. Furness was going to close the house next week. He was going to take Flora around the world. They were going to be gone for a year. Mr. Furness said he might never open the brown-stone house again.

"I'm awfully tired," said Flora suddenly. She looked tired and very white in the sable folds of her crisp new mourning.

"Go and lie down," said Jane brightly. "We've almost finished."

The sound of the doorbell rang through the silent house.

"That's Stephen," said Flora. "I forgot all about him. He said he would drop in on his way home from the bank for a cup of tea."

"Never mind Stephen," said Jane. "You go and rest. I'll go down and explain to him. I'll give him tea."

Jane ran lightly down the staircase. She looked a fright, she thought, after a day spent poking into shelves and boxes. Her hair was very mussy and, when she closed one eye, she could see a streak of soot on one side of her nose. She paused by the walnut hat-rack to remove it with her handkerchief. Then passed in through the drawing room door.

Stephen Nice, Thought Jane.

Stephen Carver was standing at the open front window, looking out at the flowering lilacs. Their sweet, passionless perfume pervaded the room. The gold-and-green furniture was all in linen covers. The rugs were up and the crystal chandelier was swathed in a great canvas bag. It all looked very cool and clean and unlived-in. Stephen turned at the sound of her step.

"Hello, Jane," he said. He looked awfully pleased.

"Flora's too tired to come down," said Jane. "We—we've been working all day long."

Stephen nodded gravely. He knew what they had been doing.

"Ring for tea," said Jane. "Flora said I was to give it to you."

Stephen pulled the beaded bell-rope by the white marble fireplace. Jane sat down on the linen-covered "bergere."

"You look tired, too," said Stephen sympathetically.

Stephen was nice, thought Jane. She had come to feel very near to Stephen in the last sad weeks. He had been very sweet with Flora.

"I am tired," said Jane.

The butler brought in the tea. The big silver tea-set was down at the bank. The little china service on the old tin tray looked very strange in the Furnesses' drawing room.

"I'll never see a china tea-set," thought Jane suddenly, "without thinking of Andre's mother."

She made Stephen's tea in silence. She was much too tired to talk. She didn't have to talk to Stephen. She knew him awfully well.

Stephen Drinks Without Word.

Stephen didn't seem to have much to say, himself. He sat across the swept and garnished hearth and drank his tea without uttering a word.

"I'm glad Flora's going away," said Jane presently. "It will be good for her."

"You'll be going away, yourself, soon," said Stephen.

Jane's face lit up at the thought. Her father was taking a three months' holiday that summer. Such a thing hadn't occurred since he had gone abroad with Jane's mother eleven years before. They were going to make the grand tour of the West. They were going first to Yellowstone Park. Jane was thrilled over the plan.

"Yes," she said simply. "It will be good for me. I'm awfully glad to go."

"Are you really?" said Stephen. He put his teacup down as he spoke.

"Of course," said Jane. "I've never seen a mountain."

There was a little pause.

"I hate to have you go," said Stephen, breaking it.

Jane was a little surprised at just the way he said it. She looked over at him rather questioningly. Stephen was sitting, elbows on knees, his head bent to look at his clasped hands.

"Oh, you won't be lonely," said Jane lightly. "You know lots of people now. Chicago is fun in summer."

"No One Will Do but You."

"Lots of people won't do," said Stephen. He was still looking at his hands. Jane knew just how he felt. Very few people "did," of course, when you came down to it. Stephen must miss his friends in Boston. Suddenly he looked up at her.

"No one will do—but you—Jane," he said hesitatingly. "Surely, you know that."

The note in his voice was suddenly very alarming. Jane felt a little frightened. Stephen stood up. He walked quickly over to the "bergere" and stood looking down at her.

"Jane," he said, "you know how I feel about you."

Jane was shrinking back into one corner of the great armchair, staring up into his suddenly ardent face.

"No—no, I don't," she said defensively.

"I love you," said Stephen. He said the three words very quickly, with a funny little gasp at the end. His face was flushed.

Jane's hands flew up as if she could ungibly put the three words away from her.

"No, you don't, Stephen!" she cried quickly. "No, you don't!"

"Oh, yes, I do," said Stephen.

Jane looked up at him very solemnly. Her hands dropped limply in her lap.

"I love you—terribly," said Stephen. "I've loved you from the night we first met, here in this house."

"Oh, no!" said Jane again, piteously. "That—that isn't possible."

"I've never loved any one else," said Stephen, "like this."

"But you will!" cried Jane, hopefully. "Oh, Stephen, you will!"

Jane Feels Helpless Guilt.

"Do you mean," he said, stiffly, at last. "Do you mean—there's no hope for me?"

Jane felt terribly overcome with a sense of helpless guilt. She—she ought to have known this was coming. Clever girls did. Flora and Muriel always had.

"Do you mean," said Stephen, a little hoarsely, "that you—that you can't care for me—at all?"

Jane shook her head, very slowly. She felt dreadfully sorry for him.

"No—I can't," said said, simply. "Not that way."

"I thought," he said, sadly, "I thought—these last weeks—"

Jane rose suddenly to her feet. She stepped right up to Stephen and took his hands in hers.

"Stephen," she said, "you've been darling to Flora. And darling to me. I—I'm terribly fond of you. But I don't love you. I don't love you at all."

"How do you know?" asked Stephen, eagerly. He was holding her hands now, close against his breast. "How do you know—if you're terribly fond of me?"

"I know," said Jane. She dropped her eyes as she felt them fill with tears. She could see the moonlit beach that minute. She could feel the shattering sense of Andre's nearness.

"Jane——" pleaded Stephen. "You can't be sure."

"I'm very sure," said Jane. She withdrew her hands from his.

Feels Andre's Lips Again.

"I'll never give you up," said Stephen. Jane shuddered, faintly, at his ill-chosen words. She could feel Andre's lips on hers in the dim-lit side vestibule. "You're mine," he'd said; "I'll never give you up."

"Don't—don't talk like that," said Jane sharply. She turned toward the door. "I'm going home now. You must let me go, Stephen. I—I don't want hear you."

He looked terribly sorry and just a little hurt, but Jane didn't care. She couldn't care for any one now, in the sudden surge of memories that had overwhelmed her. Andre. Andre Duroy. She would never care like that for any one again. She wasn't even sure that she would care like that for Andre, now, if she could see him. But Jane knew. Jane knew all too well.

"I don't love you, Stephen," she said, with dignity, on the threshold. He just stared dumbly at her from the empty hearthstone. Jane turned and left the room.

* * * *

He's crazy about you," said Muriel lightly. "It's ridiculous for you to say you haven't noticed it. Isn't he crazy about her, Isabel?"

Muriel was sitting on Jane's window seat, looking out into the lemon-colored leaves of the October willow. Isabel was perched on Jane's bed. Little John Ward was standing in a baby pen in the center of the room. Jane was sitting on the floor beside him. She had only been back three weeks from the West and a walking John Ward was still a provocative novelty.

"As If He'd Like to Eat You."

"You never can tell with men," said Isabel warily.

"I can tell," said Muriel, shaking her curls, very sagely. "Last night at the Saddle and Cycle he never took his eyes off her."

"Eyes aren't everything," said Isabel. "How about it, Jane?"

Jane looked up from the baby. She met their eager glances very coolly.

"Muriel's a bride," she said, calmly. "She's not responsible for her views on sentiment."

"Stephen's a lover!" retorted Muriel. "He's not responsible for his. He looked at you across the table, Jane, as if he'd like to eat you."

"How cannibalistic of him!" smiled Jane, cheerfully. "Somehow that picture doesn't lead me on."

"You're a perfect idiot," said Muriel, "if you don't accept him." Again she glanced at the bedstead for support. "Isn't she, Isabel?"

Isabel became suddenly practical.

"What's wrong with him, Jane?" she asked, earnestly. "He's young"—her voice faltered a moment, with a glance at Muriel, over that qualification. She went hurriedly on. "And good-looking, and he has plenty of money and a very good family, and he's your best friend's cousin. I'd say he was made to order, if you asked me."

Stephen "Not of Doormta Stuff."

"Why don't you fancy him, Jane? You know he's in love with you," said Muriel, accusingly. "You ought to have seen her last night, Isabel. You wouldn't have known our Jane. She just wiped her feet on him."

"Who does June wipe her feet on?" questioned Mrs. Ward's voice. Jane's mother stood, smiling, on the threshold.

"Stephen Carver," said Muriel, promptly, ignoring Jane's warning eyebrow.

Mrs. Ward looked very much pleased.

"She's a very foolish girl if she does," she said, advancing into the room. "Stephen Carver," went on Mrs. Ward, "is a very charming young fellow. If Jane is wiping her feet on him she may find out when it's too late that he's not the stuff of which doormats are made."

"Oh—I think he likes it," said Muriel. "He does like it, doesn't he, Jane?"

Jane couldn't help smiling a trifle self-consciously. Stephen did like to have her notice him anyway at all. He had been terribly glad to see her when she came back from the West. And she had been—not terribly, but really very glad to see him. He had given her a whirl at all the early autumn parties. Last night at the Saddle and Cycle Club—well—Jane knew very well that she shouldn't have acted just the way she did, since she didn't love Stephen at all and wanted, so terribly, to make it perfectly clear to him that she never could.

"You'd like it, wouldn't you, Mrs. Ward?" asked Muriel impishly.

Mrs. Ward Disconcerted.

Mrs. Ward looked a trifle disconcerted. She exchanged with Isabel a slightly embarrassed glance.

"Every mother," said Mrs. Ward a trifle sententiously, "would like her daughter's happiness."

Isabel rose from the bed.

"I've got to go, Jane," she said. "Hand me Jacky."

Jane picked up her nephew over the railing of the pen. His little arms twined confidently around her neck. His fat little diapered figure felt very firm and solid in her arms. It would be fun to have a baby, all your own, thought Jane. It would be fun to have a home of your own like Isabel and Muriel. However, there was more to marriage, Jane reflected very sagely, than a home and a baby. And she didn't love him at all. Stephen. She didn't love him at all.

Isabel took Jacky.

"I'll walk along with you, Isabel," said Muriel. "Good-by, Jane. Don't come down."

Mrs. Ward turned to Jane as soon as the other two girls were out of hearing. She still looked pleased, and a little excited.

"What's this, Jane," she said, "about Stephen Carver?"

"Just Muriel's nonsense," said Jane. "Is he really in love with you?" said Mrs. Ward.

"Oh, Mamma!" protested Jane very lightly. "You know Muriel."

Mrs. Ward Likes Stephen.

Mrs. Ward was looking at her very attentively.

"Has he asked you to marry him?" she said.

Jane hesitated for an almost imperceptible instant.

"Not—not this fall," she said.

"Last winter?" said Mrs. Ward very quickly.

Jane hesitated no longer.

"Of course not, Mamma. I hardly knew him last winter."

Mrs. Ward looked rather puzzled. Janes felt very triumphant and only a little untruthful. May was not winter.

"He's a very dear boy," said Mrs. Ward impressively. "I like Stephen Carver."

Jane made no comment. She began to fold up the baby pen.

"Your father admires him, too," said Mrs. Ward.

"How about Isabel?" asked Jane sweetly. "And Robin? And the baby?"

Mrs. Ward laughed in spite of herself.

"They do all like him," she said.

Families were terrible, thought Jane. But her eyes were twinkling.

"So if I did, too," she said brightly, "it would make it unanimous."

"Do you?" said Mrs. Ward.

"Mamma," said Jane, "you are really shameless."

She walked out of the room with the baby pen. She was going to put it away in the back hall.

EVERY BUILDING IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

PROPERTY owners—individually and collectively—create the conditions which determine the cost of their fire insurance.

To establish rates in keeping with individual conditions requires careful measurement and estimate of the fire hazards in practically every commercial building.

Consider the size of that task—with details of construction, occupancy, protection and exposure to be recorded. Even then one has but an incomplete idea of the service involved in establishing fire insurance rates.

Through the inspection and rating organization in your state, supports a free inspection service. This inspection organization is constantly advising property owners and communities as to specifications for new buildings or changes in old ones—the installation of fire protective devices—community fire prevention programs—and fire safety activities. All of this service is free.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

Engineering Standards—Underwriters' Laboratory Tests

Engineering standards published by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, also researches and tests of Underwriters' Laboratories pertaining to the strength and usefulness of materials and devices, are available to the inspection organization.

Should an owner desire to improve his property where standard conditions do not already prevail, information showing him how to do it will be supplied without charge through his insurance agent or broker.

STOCKS AGAIN LOSE IN DREARY MARKET

Day's Decline on 90 Issues at Close Averages 3.5 Points; Steel Drops.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The dreary drop in stock prices started promptly with the opening gong today and carried through to an uninspiring close.

The market moved slowly and quietly, but with buying interest at a minimum there was nothing to check the decline, and the average loss, as shown in the composite of 90 issues, was 3.5 points. Sales totaled 1,900,000 shares, smaller than most of lats week's volumes.

The Standard Statistics Associated Press average is now virtually at the 1926 minimum, but another commonly used index, embracing few shares, has broken through the low of that year. Except for a few minor technical rallies, the market has been moving steadily downward from the 1931 peak of late February, attracting a substantial amount of real liquidation.

Impetus for the decline has been provided by a group of bearish professionals who in recent weeks have concentrated on the leading stocks with the result that yields, on present dividends, now average more than 6 per cent for the 90 stocks used in the Standard Statistics composite. This contrasts with a return of less than 4½ per cent on the same company's high-grade bond list.

Steel Leads Decline.

United States Steel common led today's decline, dropping 4¼ points to 94¼, which duplicated its 1924 low. It closed at 94⅜. American Telephone took another hard pounding and tumbled to 162⅜. Its net loss equaled Steel's. Reports of seasonal tapering off in automobile sales directed pressure against General Motors, which lost more than 2, while General Electric went to a new low.

Rails turned down, losing 1 to nearly 5 points. Utilities sympathized with Telephone, although their average still holds several points above last December's low. Coppers were steadier, but amusements encountered selling. Auburn's extreme loss was 24½ points, and it finished only 2 points from the bottom.

Grains were heavy and cotton weak. September wheat touched 57⅞ cents, equaling the seasonal low made on April 2, which in turn was the minimum since 1895. Corn prices were the lowest in about nine years, although the net losses in both grains ranged only from a fraction to a cent. The Farm Board's wheat stabilization operations ceaze with the end of the current month, but the trade seems to be bearing in mind the prospects of a large crop and the fact that the Government agency is holding more than 200,000,000 bushels.

Cotton Prices Break.

Cotton broke $1.25 a bale, which sent the July future below 9 cents, the lowest since 1915. Some of the recent selling in this staple has been by speculators who dispcsed of their holdings to bolster stock market accounts.

The optimistic note sounded by President Farrell, of U. S. Steel, in his radio talk, contrasted with his gloomier remarks last Friday, but the latter concerned the steel industry only while in his Sunday night address he was concerned with business in general. Incidentally, the market appeared to ignore both speeches.

Encouragement was offered by the Federal Reserve Board's report that its industrial output index had risen a point in April. Railroad earnings for last month are showing some improvement in comparison with 1930, and a few increases are appearing. Operating costs of most roads have been cut sharply in the past year.

The money markets were dull. Foreign exchange fluctuated narrowly, for the Whitsuntide holidays were being observed in most European capitals.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—Despite a rallying tendency shown much of the time, grains finished lower today, with corn and oats outdoing season bottom price records. Weakness of stocks and of cotton led to free selling of cereals. Grain price setbacks were in the face of authoritative unofficial estimates that recent frosts had reduced the Kansas prospective wheat yield 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed irregular, ranging from 1¼ cents drop to ¼ advance, corn ⅞@1⅛ down, oats ⅛@⅜ off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents decline.

Nervous action characterized the wheat market from the beginning. Word that rains had checked crop deterioration in western Kansas and elsewhere Southwest had an early bearish effect. Weakness of securities was also an early unsettling factor, but believers in high prices for wheat took courage temporarily owing to continued drought news from the spring wheat belt on both sides of the Canadian boundary. There were also advices of cutworm damage to winter wheat in Texas and of crop injury from Hessian fly and frost in Kansas.

Highest prices of the day in grain were reached after a Chicago crop authority issued a statement putting recent frost damage to wheat in Kansas at possibly 15,000,000 bushels. He had made personal first-hand observation, and said that wheat in all low and medium low places to the north from east of Waldo, Kans., to west of Lincoln Center was injured, the plants hit by frost being in stages that varied from ahead of the boot stage to head showing and partial pollination. World shipments of wheat included the largest North American clearances in a long time, 10,025,000 bushels. On the other hand, domestic wheat receipts continued extremely heavy.

Favorable weather for field work over the corn belt sent corn down to within 2 cents of the low record reached in 1921. Oats followed corn.

Provisions kept in line with hog values. Lard prices were down to the lowest level since 1908.

BOND PRICES LOWER IN QUARTER MARKET

Gilt-Edge Issues Are Higher but 30 Selected Loans Lose at Close.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The bond market staged a general decline today. Trading was much less active than recently, both in the over-the-counter market and on the stock exchange, where sales totaled $8,584,000.

With the exception of United States Treasury and Liberty loans, gilt-edge issues were firm or slightly higher. That the decline in the rest of the market was extensive may be realized from the fact that the average of closing prices of 30 representative issues composed of equal numbers of industrials, rails and public utilities dropped to 94.7, a net loss of four-tenths of a point for the day.

Considerable selling pressure developed in the Treasury 4¼ per cent bonds of 1947-52, which lost almost one-half point. The volume in the fourth Liberty 4¼s was larger than in the Treasury issue but the net decline was smaller. Most other members of this group lost ground also.

However, some high grade corporate bonds such as American Smelting & Refining 5s, American Telephone collateral trust 5s, Pennsylvania Bell Telephone series B 5s, Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s, Duquesne Light 4½s, Morris & Essex 4½s, New England Telephone 4½s and Public Service Electric & Gas 4s of 1971 and 4½s of 1967 gained ground. A few of this class of bonds even reached new 1931 peak prices.

Losses among foreign obligations were narrower than the usual fluctuations in this group, probably because the trading in many of them was limited to a few small sales. Loans of Antioquia scored wide gains. Argentina, Brazilian, Australian and Chilean obligations recorded some of the larger declines.

Trading among domestic corporate bonds was concentrated pretty much in a few well-known issues. The losses in the great majority of such bonds were narrow fractions.

Curb Review

New York, May 26 (A.P.).—The curb market took another dive into new low ground today.

Losses were largely limited to a point or two, but as there is only a handful of active issues selling above 40 in this market now, losses of a point or two are substantial. Transfers for the day aggregated 400,000 shares.

Electric Bond & Share dropped 1¾ to a new minimum at 37 in active trading. American Gas & Electric declined 3, and Middle West Utilities dropped 1¾ to a new bottom at 16¼, then recovered to 17.

Oils were less freely sold than utilities, but Gulf broke nearly 3 to a new minimum, and Cities Service and Vacuum reacted about a point. Standard of Kentucky, on the other hand, rallied a point.

The industrial specialities were featured by a wide-open break in Pilot Radio from Saturday's close of 18¾ to 9¾, almost halving its quoted value. This issue had surged up from 3½ to 23¼ earlier in the year. The management said there were no developments in the company's affairs to account for the break and that earnings were better than a year ago.

Among the few high-priced issues, Parker Rust Proof and A. O. Smith each dropped 8 points, the latter to a new low at 111¼. Aluminum Co. reacted 4 points.

Investment trusts were heavy in spots. National Bond & Share sold off 2 points to 27½, a new low.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—All deliveries of cotton made new low records today with July selling off to 8.73, or 25 points net lower, and closing at that figure. The market closed barely steady at net declines of 25 to 27 points.

The opening was barely steady 10 to 16 points lower under liquidation combined with some local and Southern selling which appeared to be prompted by reports of more favorable weather conditions over Sunday in the South. There was considerable covering and some trade buying which was supposed to include those absorbed the initial offerings, but the demand was by no means strong or aggressive. Fresh selling continued and drove prices gradually lower. Forecasts of continued warm weather in the South and the unsettled ruling of the stock market evidently encouraging bearish sentiment but the selling was attributed largely to the liquidation of old long accounts. October declined to 9.08 in the late trading while December sold off to 9.28 at closing quotations, were within a point or two of the lowest.

Owing to the continuance of the Whitsuntide holidays there were no quotations from the Liverpool or continental markets, but houses with both Liverpool and continental connections were credited with selling here at times during the day.

At the low prices reached in the afternoon the market showed a decline of nearly 150 points from the high prices and there may have been some buying for a reaction as well as covering in the late trading, although it was not active enough to make much impression on the market. Port receipts, 4,746. United States port stocks, 3,300,292. Exports today, 5,799, making 6,285,639 so far this season.

MACKMEN BEAT YANKS TWICE TO WIN 17TH IN ROW

Grove Master in Opener, 4-2; Athletics Blast Out Victory in 2d Game, 16-4

Pound Sherid and McEvoy for 9 Runs in First Inning.

Hits by Simmons and Combs Extend Long Batting Streaks.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25 (U.P.).—The Athletics stretched their winning streak to 17 consecutive games today when they took both ends of a double-header from the New York Yankees, considered one of their most dangerous rivals for the 1931 American League pennant, before a banner crowd of 32,000.

Lefty Grove pitched the Athletics to a 4-to-2 decision in the first contest, while in the second the Philadelphia batters clubbed three New York hurlers for 16 hits and breezed to a 16-to-4 victory.

The defeats dropped the Yankees to third place, a half game behind the Washington club, whose scheduled contest with the Boston Red Sox was postponed because of rain. The twin triumph increased Philadelphia's leadership five full games.

Grove Invincible in Pinches.

Grove was invincible in the pinches to turn the Yankees back in the first game, his fifth consecutive triumph. In the seventh, after New York had men on first and third with no one out, he fanned Reese and Ruth and got Gehrig on an infield tap. In the ninth he fanned Ruth and Gehrig to end the game as the Yankees had the tying runs on second and third. The Athletics scored enough runs to clinch the contest in the third inning, when they combined three hits off Henry Johnson for as many tallies.

In the second contest, Philadelphia knocked Roy Sherid from the mound in the first inning during a nine-run assault. They continued the heavy hitting while Leroy Mahaffey held the Yankees at bay. He pitched shutout ball for the first seven innings, allowing only one hit.

Simmons and Combs Prolong Streaks.

The consecutive-game hitting streaks of both Al Simmons and Earl Combs survived the twin bill. Combs, with two singles in the first game and another in the second, prolonged hsi streak to 24 games. Simmons, with a single in the first and a double in the second, has now hit safely in 23 consecutive games.

Ferrell Halts Chisox Rally as Tribe Wins

Cleveland, Ohio, May 25 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Indians stood off a ninth-inning rally to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 6, and thus even the four-game series today.

After a five-run rally in the eighth had given him a 7-to-4 lead, Hudlin weakened in the ninth, walking Tate and allowing McKain to double. Both scored off Ferrell, but the fast-ball artist forced two batters to ground and one to fly out to end the game. Eddie Morgan, Indian first baseman, hit his first home run of the season, with one on, in the sixth.

Athletics Aim at Mark Of 19 Straight Games

With the seventeenth consecutive victory registered yesterday, the Athletics are two games short of the American League record for successive triumphs set by the Chicago White Sox in 1906. The National League record of 26 straight games is held by the Giants. The Nats hold the American League record for most consecutive games won away from home with 16 scored in 1912.

Cubs Snap Out of It To Beat Pirates, 9-6

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cubs came out of their batting slump today and pounded Kremer and Grant for a 9-to-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the final of the series. Les Sweetland went the route for the Cubs to win his third victory of the season.

The Pirates scored two runs in the third, due to Lloyd Waner's double, but the Cubs came back and got three, when Hornsby doubled with two on and came home when Stephenson singled.

From then on the Cubs pounded the Pirate pitchers at will, with Hornsby getting another double, Grimm a triple and Moore a home run.

Nats Idle Due To Box Office Strategy

Red Sox Call Game Off at Hint of Rain; Twin Bill Tomorrow.

Jones to Hurl Today; Boston Has "Find" in Pickering.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

BOSTON, Mass., May 25.—When is baseball weather not baseball weather? The answer, according to the Boston Red Sox management, is any day that there is the slightest excuse to postpone a game so as to make a double-header possible. It was one of those types of days here today. A few drops of rain fell about 1:30 o'clock, but this was enough for President Bob Quinn, who immediately called the game off and announced that a more profitable bargain-day bill would be offered the cash customers Wednesday.

Even the Boston players, who are used to most anything, were surprised that no game would be played, while the Nationals had no idea that they would be forced to idle and were dressing in preparation for the usual pregame practice when they were told to get dressed again and go back to their hotel, to a movie, or elsewhere. That these conditions are not exaggerated may be gleaned from the fact that most of the players walked the mile or more back to their Boston headquarters—and it stands to reason that people do not take long hikes in the rain.

Sam Jones Pitching Choice Today.

Manager Walter Johnson had in mind using Southpaw Carl Fischer against the Red Sox this afternoon, but when the game was declared off he shifted his tomorrow's assignment to the veteran Sad Sam Jones, who finished Sunday's game in Washington. Fischer and Lloyd Brown will make a left-handed day of it from a Nat mound viewpoint in the Wednesday's double-header. Milton Gaston, former National, is expected to do the alien flinging tomorrow.

Manager Johnson was almost apologetic upon his arrival here this morning for his team's showing against the Beaneaters in Washington Sunday. "We won," he said, "but we looked terrible. We did so well in the West and displayed such heads-up baseball that I felt kind of proud taking the team back home so that the home fans could see how we had improved since we left. Instead of that, they made me feel like a kiddie sometimes embarasses a parent before company.

"Sunday we didn't show any pep, didn't use our heads; in fact, didn't do anything right, and the only reason we won was because the Red Sox were worse. I hope the fans will forget that showing and just consider it a very off day."

With Buddy Myer able to play again, Jack Hayes will go back to bench duty again. "Sonny Boy" did all that was expected of him afield when given his chance, but he failed miserably at bat, getting but five hits in the eight games he played on the road. Myer was getting two hits a game quite regularly at the time he hurt his wrist falling over Third-Baseman Ed Morgan in a rundown in the first game at Cleveland, and he gave indications of picking up where he left off by cracking out two safeties against the Red Sox upon his return to the line-up in the Capital City yesterday.

Pickering Strengthens Beaneaters.

"Uncle Sam's" air circus seems to be following the Nationals' schedule. They saw it twice last week—in Chicago and New York—and it was staged here today. "I'm beginning to feel that I know those birds personally. I've seen 'em so often," Coach Al Schacht remarked tonight.

Third Baseman Urban Pickering has added a lot of strength to the Red Sox and it was just by accident that the Boston Club landed him. This youngster, a hard hitter and a fair fielder, was drafted by the Giants from Clyde Milan's Birmingham Team. He failed to make the grade and McGraw asked for the usual waivers before returning him to the Barons.

These waivers were asked when the American League magnates were all "up in the air" over President Barnard's death and the player was not claimed. Quinn, it seems, was tipped off just in the nick of time to make a bid for him and now it looks as though Pickering has landed himself a steady big league job.

Youthful American Davis Cup Team Here, Line-Up Intact, for Test Against Argentina

M'LARNIN'S STYLE NOW CHANGED

Petrolle Due Surprise in Garden Match Tomorrow.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., May 25 A.P.).—There's a surprise waiting for rugged Billy Petrolle in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night and the clouting Fargo Express might just as well know it.

He'll hardly recognize Jimmy McLarnin when the Vancouver blaster lifts his fists as the first bell calls him out to avenge the worst defeat he ever suffered. They met for the first time last November when McLarnin was headed for the welterweight throne and Billy was just another old lightweight trying to come back. McLarnin took an amazing beating.

Jimmy took it standing up like a fighting man, and the final gong found him still on his feet, battered and bleeding, thoroughly whipped, his right hand fractured, but still smiling.

Jimmy Looked for Reason.

While the right hand mended and old "Pop" Foster, his manager, dickered for a return bout, Jimmy pondered the reasons for that licking. He believes he knows now why he lost and the critics who saw his final training today think he may be right.

"Itried to lean back and pull away from Petrolle's long left hooks," he explained as he lay on a rubbing table, scarcely breathing heavily after two rounds of fancy boxing and a half dozen of calisthenics, the last work he will do before the match. "But instead of getting away from his punches I backed into them. He hit me so hard on the chin in the third round I had no idea what was going on for the next three. My right thumb broke in the second round. I was all at sea.

U. S. Team to Take Workout Today at Chevy Chase.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

YOUR old Uncle Samuel's bouncing set of quadruplets—Frank Shields, Sidney Wood, Gregory Mangin and Clifford Sutter—who form the youngest American or any other nation Davis Cup team, roared into town last nightfall, accompanied by Bernon S. Prentice, nonplaying captain. Eliminators of the Canadian team only last Sunday, this morning they start their "bull pen" work preparatory to meeting Argentina at the Chevy Chase Club Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

A committee from the Chevy Chase Club, headed by Lawrence A. Baker, whisked the team away to the club, where headquarters will be established and all practices held. This morning and this afternoon the team will work out on the courts, but only as a means of keeping their muscles flexible, for it is doubtful if a more ablebodied band of conditioned tennis players was ever gathered than stepped into the Union Station last night.

Mangin Is Early Arrival.

Gregory Mangin, in whom Washingtonians have a proprietory interest by reason of his studying at Georgetown University, arrived on the train ahead of the remainder of the team.

Mr. Prentice last night spiked reports that Frank Shields, scheduled to play in the top singles position, had been already chosen to be sent to Europe—if America beats Argentina—to augment the European division of the U. S. team, composed of George Lott and John Van Ryn. Whether any or all of the members of the American zone American team will travel to the aid of the U. S. team now across the water will depend largely on their showing against the South Americans, and mostly, of course, if America wins this weekend's test.

Despite the precarious position in

FRENCH HARD COURT TITLE TO U. S. PAIR

Lott, Van Ryn Win in Straight Sets; Gain on Service.

AUTEUIL, France, May 25 (A.P.).—George Lott, jr., and John Van Ryn today won the French hard court doubles championship for the first American victory in that division of French title play since 1926.

The American youngsters defeated the South African pair, Victor Kirby and Nat Farquharson, in the final straight sets, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

The last time an American doubles team won at Auteuil was five years ago, when Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey, both professionals now, defeated Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon. The same French team won the title last year, but did not defend it because of Cochet's ill health.

The day's play saw no reverses for American players, Miss Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Miss Virginia Hilleary, of Philadelphia, winning their matches in women's singles. They were the only other Americans to play today.

South Africans Press U. S. Pair.

Miss Andrus defeated Mlle. Jean Galley, 10—8, 6—4, and Miss Hilleary disposed of Mme. de Montebello, 6—3, 6—1.

Lott and Van Ryn had a hard fight on their hands against the two South Africans. Kirby's weakness at service finally proved the margin of difference between the two teams. In all three sets the Americans broke through his service to gain telling advantages.

With three championships already gone, France looked forward pessimistically today to the final two crowns still in dispute, the women's singles and the men's singles.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody has held their women's title for three years, so they are used to not having that one, but it now appears they will not even salvage the men's singles, unless Jean Borotra, Christian Boussus and Pierre Landry improve.

Van Ryn's path to the singles final was smoothed today by the withdrawal of the English ace, H. W. (Bunny) Austin, who is conserving his energies for the Davis Cup series.

ALL-IRISH WIN GAME.

Chicago, May 24 (A.P.).—More than 20,000 of Chicago's Irish turned out today to watch the All-Irish Gaelic football team from County Kerry defeat a picked Chicago team, 17 to 3, at Soldiers Field.

2 Women Tie For D.C. Golf Medal

Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. Meckley Top Qualifiers With 88.

6 Play-Off for Place in First Sixteen; Resume Today.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE District women's golf championship opened yesterday on the course of the Chevy Chase Club with an unprecedented list of entries, 70 in number. The qualifying round resulted in a tie between Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, the present District champion, and Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, former District champion, Columbia, each with a card of 88.

Both players might have done better, and related sad stories when they had completed their rounds. Mrs. Meckley, for instance, pressing to reach the green of the long eighth hole with her third shot, played into a trap and then from trap to trap until she had scored a disastrous 9, four strokes over the par for the hole.

Mrs. Haynes recounted no less than five greens upon which she had taken three putts, as well as putts of not over four feet which had been missed, her three putts on the eighth costing her a 7.

The play-off at eighteen holes will be staged in the near future. The cards of the two leaders:

Out—
Mrs. Haynes.....556 355 574—45
Mrs. Meckley....546 355 593—45
In—
Mrs. Haynes.....454 455 565—43—88
Mrs. Meckley.....365 345 665—43—88

When all the cards had been turned in, six players with 99 played off for one place in the championship sixteen. On the first hole Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, Miss Katherine Lowman, Miss Virginia Williams and Mrs. Frank Tomlinson survived, leaving Mrs. J. F. Dryden, jr., and Mrs. H. R. Quinter to carry on the struggle to the next hole. Mrs. Dryden won and Mrs. Quinter was then assigned to the second sixteen. The times of play and pairings for the match play this morning are as follows:

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

WHEN the schoolmarms used to tell us with just a trace of a sigh about the Vanishing Americans whose wigwams were pressed slowly, but relentlessly, back across the Mississippi, and then farther West as the paleface invaded their domains, sometimes by treaty and sometimes by purchase, on one occasion swapping a whole big handful of varicolored beads for the Island of Manhattan, we first gave vent to the expression, "'Lo, the poor Indian."

And then this column happened upon a passage in the World Almanac and was tempted to raise its voice in a bellowing roar that would resent its early teachings: "Whaddya mean, the Vanishing Americans?" For there in the conventional agate type was compressed into two lines the fact that the 1930 census shows more redskins by 45,967 than were counted by Uncle Sam's enumerators in the first Indian census of 1860.

Thus, roundabout, we arrive at the analogous and interesting fact that the sandlotter, regarded popularly as the aborigine of baseball, is also far from the way of extinction, but conversely is on the increase at a healthy rate that is wasting whatever sympathy is extended in their behalf.

Vacant Lot Gone

Sandlot baseball got its start on the vacant lot and with the arrival of steam shovels and enterprising real estate developers, the boys now grown to manhood were shoved off their ball fields, but the boy of today has taken his ball team to better and regulation diamonds considerately provided by the municipality and there the sandlotter has thrived just as the Indian has thrived and multiplied on his Government reservation.

And it's better baseball the kids are playing these days. The Post's Capital City League is an index to that and a bright commentary on the heightened interest in sandlot baseball under better conditions. In bold and conclusive rebuttal to the impression that the sandlotter was finding the times hard and the fields scarce, are the 58—count 'em—teams competing in six age classes of the Capital City League alone.

Every one of these lads are under contract with their clubs and the signed agreements repose in the office of the Capital City League's headquarters at The Post. It's a new era for sandlotters and has been since thre Capital City League became the governing body of sandlot baseball in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland seven years ago.

No More "Padding"

There's none of the jumping of players from team to team and the "padding" of the line-up for important games that marked the sandlots a decade ago. The kids are bound to play with the team that holds their contracts and they learn discipline from the start of the season. Their schedules are arranged weeks in advance and competent association umpires are on the scene for each contest.

It's a far cry from the sandlotter of a decade or more back when Joe Dokes, the best pitcher in the community, played with his own club on Sundays, the Rinkey Dinks on Mondays, the Gas House on Tuesdays and other clubs on other days of the week, if a game could be arranged, and an umpire procured. Also, they took the long chance of being run home with great rapidity if the outcome was not exactly satisfactory to the weight of opinion present.

The kids are smart, too. In Washington, where the sandlotters are in close proximity to the major league ball fields, they imbibe a liberal education in big league tactics and mannerism, and they are the best mimics in the world. On any sandlot diamond today you'll find the tots of 10 and 12 and the bigger boys affecting all the motions of Muddy Ruel behind the bat, Joe Judge at first base, Sammy West in center field and any one of our best pitchers. They take it seriously, and it makes for better baseball.

Also Basket Ball

Five years ago, when Washington was represented in the American Professional Basket Ball League, the kid basket ball teams were playing a haphazard style of game featured by a slam-bang rush for the basket. Then they watched the pros in action, and the game among the kids underwent a rapid and complete metamorphosis. In a comparative twinkling they were passing, dribblin, body checking, picking off and shooting like Elmer Ripley, Nat Holman, Horse Haggerty, Rusty Saunders and the rest of the stars.

At the age when the kids of a generation ago were lugging water and bats and shagging wild pitches for their big brothers, the lads of today have teams of their own, official umpires, scorekeepers, managers and regulation equipment, thanks in many cases to business firms which are generous in their sponsorship of the clubs. In the Capital City League, 26 of the 58 teams are under the wing of responsible business or civic organizations. In all cases they play with big league balls. Many have $12 shoes, $15 suits, $1.50 bats and sliding pads. Don't say Lo, the poor sandlotter.

NURMI WINS IN LONDON.

London, May 25 (A.P.).—Paavo Nurmi, the once peerless Finn, today won the four-mile run in the British track and field games at Stamford Bridge, but failed by 23 seconds to beat his own world standard of 19 minutes, 15 6-10 seconds, set in 1924.

His winning time was 19 minutes, 38 4-10 seconds.

Item of Cost of Sports In America No Deterrent As in England, France

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, May 25.—One important matter which is always overlooked in the comparisons between sport in the United States and sport in European countries, including Great Britain, is the fact that sport on the American scale costs much more money than the Europeans, including the British, are able, or, if able, are willing to spend.

This may have the sound of vulgar ostentation, but I have recently been listening to an American novelist, who lives in England but sells his books in the United States, being very British about the perfectly jolly times that they have there playing tennis at house parties or playing informal rugger without cheering sections or taking priceless long walks through the gorse and weather and all that with pipe in mouth and burrs in the tweeds and an invigorating mist beating in one's face.

My answer was that if that was his idea of a wonderful time everything was still O K, but that the American idea was qu

MANGAN AND MARKEY WIN CITY DOUBLES TITLE

O'Neill-Love Lose 4-Set Match

Stone-Newbold Down Tabler Sisters in Women's Final.

Mrs. Stone to Meet Clara Tabler Today in Singles Final.

WHATEVER doubts the local bench experts had in their minds that Tom Morgan, veteran former D. C. champion, was a doubles player of no material worth were dispelled once and for all yesterday afternoon when he, combined this time with Bud Markey, won the City of Washington men's doubles for the third consecutive time. Yesterday's winners up were Maurice O'Neill and Douglas Love, who succumbed by the scores of 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1.

Lacking in many respects the accepted earmarks of a doubles players, to wit, an aggressive volley, half-volley, and overhead, Mangan nevertheless has won every doubles title of major importance in this region since 1926, including two Middle Atlantic championships, two District's, one Wardman Park and, as said, three City of Washington's.

While the teamplay of Mangan and Markey left a bit to be desired, they experienced only passing difficulty yesterday in subduing the challenge of the team which last year placed second to Mangan and Bob Considine. Far superior in point serving and returning service, Mangan and Markey found victory through these two virtues and a moderate mixture of volleying and lobbing.

Overanxiousness Proves Costly.

Evidently overanxious to score, O'Neill and Love fell a prey time after time to the tactics of Mangan and Markey, who for the most part were content to keep their opponents on the run and force them to do the erring.

Mrs. Charles F. Stone and Mrs. Jack Newbold, who heretofore have done the bulk of their playing at the Chevy Chase Club, are the women's doubles champions of Washington by reason of their victory yesterday over the Tabler sisters, Clara and Amy, 8—6, 6—3. Matching their opponents in speed of shot and foot, Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Newbold won because they managed to crack the defense of Amy Tabler. Concentrating on this sister, the two matrons eked out the first set and won the second almost decisively.

Today's main event is the finals of the women's singles, to be played between the major stars of yesterday's finals in Women's doubles, Mrs. Stone and Clara Tabler. Starting at 4 o'clock, today's match promises to produce some o fthe greatest play in women's tennis this city has seen in a decade.

Both Good on Defense.

While both players are of the hard-hitting school, fundamentally, each is shown a defensive side in previous matches. In defeating Mrs. Martinez Sunday, Miss Tabler discarded her mannish stroking to chop and outsteady the public parks champion. Practically the same state of affairs resulted in the match Sunday in which Mrs. Stone eliminated Frances Walker.

The finals of the men's singles have been held over until next Sunday, leaving the only other event on today's schedule to the semifinal mixed doubles matches.

Wilson Goes to Bench For Batting Weakness

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—For the first time since he became a Cub regular, Hack Wilson, home run champion of the major leagues last season, has been benched for any reason other than injury.

Wilson, who has batted out only 9 home runs this season, and whose batting average to date is only .266—compared to his finishing mark of .345 in 1930, yesterday was relegated to the bench by Rogers Hornsby, in an effort to add power to the Cub attack. Hornsby did not say that Wilson would not be in the ball game when the club opens in Cincinnati Tuesday, but indicated that the big slugger would rest for several days.

It was reported while the Cubs were in New York that Wilson was to be removed from the line-up, and he did remain out for a day. However, Hornsby denied that Hack had been benched down for any reason except an injury to a finger. He also denied that there was friction between himself and Wilson, and has continued to deny it.

Riggs Stephenson went to left field and Johnny Moore played in center Sunday. Stephenson punched out three hits.

—Washington Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

WASHINGTON PARK, Chicago, May 25.—Most of the events on the card received limit fields, but the Olympia Fields Handicap, a test over the mile course, which features the program tomorrow afternoon, attracted but four 3-year-olds and upward to contest the $1,500 purse.

Supporting the main event will be an allowance affair for 3-year-olds and upward, at 6 furlongs, to be run as the fourth number. This heat will bring out eleven first-class speedsters and should result in a keenly contested struggle.

In the headliner, SWEEP ALL, fresh from his brilliant performance in the Derby, has trained briskly for his return and should score over his three opponents. BARGELLO, from the C. V. Whitney string, with an impost of 118 pounds, is conceding 16 to the top one. This difference in weight assignment may stop the Whitney color bearer. NOSTAW, owned by Miss B. Watson, figures better than MAYA for the short end of the purse.

The secondary feature brings together an evenly matched field of sprinters to decide the $1,400 purse. C. V. Whitney's CHIMNEY SWEEP has the speed of this field, and at the distance is given the call. The son of Whiskbroom II scored a brilliant victory in 1:11 3-5 in his last winning effort at the Downs and should lead this group to the wire. ELLICE, consistent sprinter in the J. W. Ellis Stable, weakened in his previous outing after setting the pace, and with that race as a conditioner should go well here. GOLD STEP rates the show call on his best form.

FIRST RACE—A limit field of 20 maiden 2-year-olds will battle it out over the 5-furlong dash of the opening number. DYAK, from the Everglade Stable, a strong finisher, is favored to graduate from this band of nonwinners. DAD MEINERS is attaining his best form and should furnish the opposition. CERVEZA has displayed speed in recent outings and is given the show call.

SECOND RACE—The second event, fashioned for 3-year-olds exclusively, will bring out a field of seventeen platers to contest the issue over the 6-furlong distance. TOWN LIMIT, from the J. W. Parrish string, is well suited by the conditions and should annex the purse. BURGOO has turned in fast moves and is ready for a winning effort. GETTIN EVEN, carrying the I. B. Krick silks, and JOEY BIBB are closely matched for the minor award.

THIRD RACE—The customary field of twenty juvenile fillies will parade to the post in the third heat, which will be decided at 5 furlongs. MALIGNED, a recent winner at the Downs, is the choice over this field of platers. The F. Johnson filly also raced well during the winter and figures to score easily. ANITA ORMONT surprised in her last victorious effort, in which she defeated a strong field of juveniles. In this company the Axton miss must be conceded a chance. LITTLE COUSIN closed stoutly in her last start and should get into the money.

SIXTH RACE—Another group of twenty platers will face the barrier in the 1⅛ miles of the sixth event. MARY-DALE turned in some fine performances in Maryland and, with several fast trials to her credit, looms as the logical choice. BRUSH, from the Etowah Stable, was forced to overcome interference to score last start and, with better racing luck, may prove troublesome to the top selection. The Audley Farm's ANN CLAY is rounding to form and should last to take down the show.

SEVENTH RACE—In the final event on the card eighteen 3-year-olds and upward will be dispatched over the 1⅛-mile route, with the claiming clause attached. KEITH displayed a high turn of speed in his Maryland campaign and over this distance appears well suited. LION-HEARTED, from the J. J. Conway string, will favor the track conditions and rates the place call. GRAYDALE raced well at Aurora and figures best of the others for the minor share of the purse.

U. S. TENNIS STARS ARRIVE IN CAPITAL

which he placed U. S. hopes by losing to Marcel Rainville in the first day's matches of the Canada-U. S. tie, there is little reason to believe that Sidney Wood's name would not be assigned to play singles against the South American zone winners Thursday and Saturday. Wood's reputation as one who permits his opponents to assume large leads before stepping on the figurative gas is well known in tennis circles, but his reputation as a player of extraordinary skill and promises far outweigh this virtual railing.

It is felt, in experting sectors, that Wood, on his game, could beat Rainville by most any score he pleased.

The impending arrival of the favored American team did little to dispell the optimism rampant in the camp of the Argentine forces yesterday. Another long practice sorte was staged, with all hands joining in under the guidance of Edwin French, elderly nonplaying captain. Ronaldo Boyd and Willy Robson again proved that they are the best of the crop by virtue of superior stroking and longer experience on the courts of the world.

Team Is Guest at Embassy.

Boyd, the red-haired giant of the team, took matters easy yesterday in order to favor a badly blistered little finger on his right hand. After the practice session the team attended a tea at the Argentine Embassy, excepting Robson, whose workout was of such a strenuous nature that even as effete an occasion seemed much more work.

Veteran of four Argentine Davis Cup Teams and habitue of the center court at Wimbledon, Willy Robson yesterday stated that this was his swan song in international competition.

Interest in the matches has far exceeded the expectations of the U. S. L. T. A. and Chevy Chase officials in charge. Boxes have all been sold for all three days of hte matches, while the sale of grandstand seats was so brisk yesterday at Spaldings, the Junior League and the club that a sellout looms as probable.

Both teams will be presented at the White House tomorrow, and play several exhibition matches upon the President court, beginning at noon. Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union, will be the guests of the guests of the teams at a luncheon following the exhibitions.

The Argentine team, an example of the strong cosmopolitanism of the country—since on the team are an Englishman, Robson; a Scotch-Irishman, Boyd, and a Norwefian, Sissener—have found Washington strongly reminiscent of their own native Buenos Aires. All five playres and Mr. French speak English fluently and show marked interest in American customs and indiosyncrasies. It is their first visit to the country, but to quote Robson literarly, things are not so strange, for the native Argentine eats American food, buys American literature, sleeps in American beds, dances to American foxtrots and then when evening comes along, takes his girl, and her chaperone to see Clara Bow.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

ANTONIO, besides being able to inflate a balloon by ejecting air through his ears, can inhale the smoke of a cigarette and force the smoke to come through his ears.

The 10-foot loaf of bread which was displayed at the Chicago convention of the Associated Bakers of America weighed 65 pounds.

The "home on wheels" of the Gates family is constructed entirely of a giant Sitka log, mounted on an automobile chassis. The interior includes a kitchen and sleeping quarters.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

RECEPTION PLANNED BY FIREMEN'S GROUP

Arlington-Fairfax Body to Entertain in Cherrydale Tomorrow Night.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association will tender a reception tomorrow evening to the ladies of the auxiliaries in the auditorium of the Cherrydale firemen's hall at 8 o'clock.

The program will include fancy dances by Jean Carl, Louise Carl and Gladys Marcey, and a number of solos by Roland Comley.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Mary J. Priest, of Alexandria, vice president of the Virginia State Ladies Auxiliary; Mrs. Charles Weitzel, of Washington, president of the ladies auxiliary of the District of Columbia; Sergt. A. J. Bargognio, of the Washington Fire Department; Mrs. Crandal Mackey, president of the ladies auxiliary of Arlington County, and members of the county board of supervisors.

The committee in charge of the arrangements includes Walter U. Varney, chairman; Frank T. Tracy, E. B. Chapman and William D. Topley.

Music will be furnished by members of the Jefferson District Fire Department Band.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the community house at 8 o'clock.

In a brief filed yesterday with the Virginia State Corporation Commission by G. O. Basham, special counsel for Arlington County in the gas-rate case, the Rosslyn Gas Co. is alleged to have failed to overcome evidence offered by the complainant showing that the present rates in Arlington County are unreasonably high. Testimony in the case was heard by the commission April 8 and 10.

The rate under attack is $1.50 per 1,000 cubic feet for the first 2,500 feet of gas consumed. It is held by the county that this rate should not be more than $1.15. The rate of 90 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for consumption over 2,500 feet and the 65-cent house-heating rate are not under attack by the county.

The brief points out that the rate must be based upon the fair value of the gas company, determined in accordance with the United States Supreme Court's decision in the Smythe vs. Ames case, which holds that the company is entitled to a fair return upon its fair value and that the public should pay no more than the services are reasonably worth.

The brief further develops a rate of $1.18 per 1,000 cubic feet, based upon the reasonable cost of gas purchased, distribution cost, including taxes and depreciation, and a fair return on the value for rate-making purposes. It is contended that the data supporting the rate is derived chiefly from the defendants' estimates and annual reports.

It is understood that the defendants' brief is due in Richmond within fifteen days and the complainant has five days after that date in which to reply.

The battle, annual tactical maneuver between the Army and Navy, will get under way tomorrow morning with the "Black" fleet in command of Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin and the land forces directed by Brig. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, commanding Fort Monroe.

Light naval craft in this area will combine with blimps and airplanes from Langley Field to assist the land forces in repelling the attack.

The first phase of the maneuvers was planned for this afterncon when destroyer squadron 3 temporarily changes its allegiance to the land forces to become an off-shore patrol.

Wednesday morning at 2:30 o'clock a night reconnaissance will be made by the enemy between Cape Henry and Cape Charles and at 12:30 p. m. the same day an attack will be made on the defending posts, Fort Story first bearing the brunt of the enemy guns.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

A BUSINESS MAN'S CREED FOR 1931.

I.

I BELIEVE in the United States of America.

I believe in the people of the United States of America.

I believe that somewhere the sun is shining.

I believe that in the long run fair weather overbalances the bad; that the expression "Good old days" is relative and that everything comes out all right in the wash.

I believe a little optimism never hurt anybody and can be taken straight.

I believe in the capacity of the American industrial leader and in the common sense of the American workingman.

I believe that Uncle Sam is still at the old stand with a high heart and a clear head, and I do not believe he is in any danger of losing his pants, coat, vest or shirt.

II.

I BELIEVE the world is going to continue to revolve in accordance with the generally accepted schedule, Mr. Stalin notwithstanding.

I believe in the total inability of Russia to change the course of the stars, to rearrange the general appearance of the heavens, to eliminate the constellations, to discontinue the daily rising of the sun, to subject the rainbow to a five-year plan or to make the American of normal backbone jump into a hole and pull it in after him.

I believe there are some fair to middling brains outside of the Soviet government.

I believe American railroads are worth considerably more than a dime a dozen.

I believe the United States Steel Corporation, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the General Electric Corporation and other big industrial institutions will stay in business and that none of them is in any danger of having to take on a sideline of lead pencils or apples.

I believe that what the country needs more than anything else is a restoration of the ducking stool for professional pessimists, squawkers, calamity howlers and confirmed grouches.

III.

I BELIEVE in the ability, instinct, capacity and power of the average American to fight his way out of any difficulty, to scale any reasonable heights, to make the final payments on the automobile, to put something in the bank and to look adversity in the face and tell it to go to hell.

I believe the American people will continue to own and operate automobiles and that there is not a Chinaman's chance that conditions will arise which will make them decide it is a good idea to go back to the bicycle and the buggy.

I believe the American housewife will continue to have an electric ice box and will never again be satisfied to spend a half day mopping up the kitchen after the visit of the old-fashioned iceman.

I believe the old-fashioned washtub has gone for good and that anybody who thinks the American wife is going back to the old days of drudgery and inconveniences is two-thirds cookoo and one-third army mule.

I believe three square meals a day will always be the American standard, but that even if we miss one or two it won't hurt us.

IV.

I BELIEVE in common sense and natural vision as opposed to the "fidgets" and the use of smoked glasses when anything goes wrong.

I believe in the silver lining, the rainbow after the storm, the plunge through center, the infallibility of the slogan "Never lead with your chin," and the potency of the cries "Block that kick!" and "Hold 'em, Yale!"

I believe the worst is over and that it never was as bad as it was advertised.

SCOURING THE PUBLIC.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., says his cash resources are down to $120. It's that sort of boasting that causes the average man to envy the rich.

The Federal Trade Commission inquiry reveals that a public utility holding company dealt in musical compositions. Possibly somebody bought some of the stock for a song.

Wall Street Briefs

J. E. Wilson has been elected president of Batchelder, Snyder, Dorr & Doe Co., a subsidiary of General Foods Co., to succeed Frederick S. Snyder, resigned.

At the annual meeting of Park Utah Consolidated Mining Co. a letter from George W. Lambourne, president, was read, stating that output now is confined to treatment of ore from development work and that mining of ore has been discontinued because of low prices prevailing for metals produced by the company. The development work is progressing favorably, he said, with encouraging results.

A shipment of $10,000,000 in gold from Buenos Aires, Argentina, has arrived in New York on the steamer Southern Cross. The metal was shipped as a part of the government's program to support the Argentine peso.

The Erie Railroad today reported April net operating income of $949,906, compared with $997,554 for the corresponding month of 1930.

Production of cotton cloth in American cotton mills during April amounted to 585,983,000 square yards, the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York reports. The calculation is based on the report of spindle hour activity released by the Department of Commerce. This total compares with an estimated output of 575,508,000 yards in March and 616,228,000 square yards in April last year.

Baltimore, Md., May 25 (A.P.).—Charles W. Pohlman, chief of the city bureau of transportation, was suspended by Mayor Howard W. Jackson today as an investigation of charges of widespread graft in the city hall was opened. A charge that Pohlman accepted commissions from hauling firms for giving them city business was made Saturday by Howard C. Beck, city auditor.

Mayor Jackson said the investigation would be made under his direction and the results turned over to State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor.

Manitoba May Use Future Grain Market

Winnipeg, Man., May 25 (A.P.).—A proposal regarded as involving use of the futures market by the Manitoba Wheat Pool, is being submitted to the pool's members. Up to now the Western Canadian Pools have denied the futures market is necessary in making Canadian wheat.

The proposal is one of two plans engaging the attention of Dominion wheat farmers, who face a crisis because of depression in the world market. The second is the Premier-Farmer-Pool conditional request for a wheat board for all Canada. The first proposal calls for a drastic change in the cooperatives' plan of disposing of wheat, which if approved will go into effect June 1. To stabilize pool finances and give the farmer a larger payment for his wheat the pool proposes to change its method of payments so that he will receive the entire spot price immediately upon delivery.

Sales of Automobiles Beginning to Decline

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—Dow, Jones & Co., in a special dispatch from Detroit says, sales of automobiles have begun to decline, and while some companies will adhere to previously established schedules for May, a few have begun to curtail operations.

It is likely that operating schedules for June will be revised downward unless retail reports for the second ten-day period of May show a change in trend over the first ten days of the month. A number of executives cling to the hope that the seasonal decline will be less pronounced than heretofore, but there is an admission in several quarters that "something seems to have hit the sales curve within the past ten days."

ALEXANDRIA HONORS LAST CONFEDERATE

Sole Survivor of Veterans' Camp Follows Flags Borne by Scouts.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.

Phone Alexandria 523.

Confederate Memorial Day was celebrated here yesterday for, rather than by, R. E. Lee Camp, United Confederate Veterans, for that camp, which once boasted 229 members, has just one member surviving.

Brig. Gen. Edgar Warfield, sole survivor of the more than 700 Confederates who marched home from Alexandria May 24, 1861, to join the other units of their command and now the last of the 229 members of R. E. Lee Camp, was the central figure in the annual observance of the day.

Earlier in the day the Confederate Monument, at Washington and Prince streets, the spot from which the Confederate troops marched to four years of bitter strife, had been decorated with lilies and a profusion of other flowers. The Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of Veterans assembled at Lee Camp Hall and marched to a point just west of the monument where the exercises were held, headed by the Citizens Band, the Alexandria Light Infantry, under command of Capt. W. Cameron Roberts; the Cadets of Alexandria High School and a color guard of Troop 126 of the Boy Scouts, who carried the faded and tattered Confederate flags. Directly following the colors which he had followed from '61 to '65, came Gen. Warfield, escorted by R. Samuel Luckett, commander of the Sons of Veterans.

At the monument, invocation was offered by the Rev. D. L. Snyder, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, after which a selection was given by a quartet, with Mrs. George E. Warfield as accompanist. Commander Luckett introduced the speaker, the Rev. E. V. Regester, D. D., presiding elder of the Alexandria District of the M. E. Church South.

Dr. Regester paid a glowing tribute to Gen. Warfield and in his remarks said: "I charge you women of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and you Sons of Veterans, that yours is a holy inheritance, and today I charge you as custodians of the traditions of those who have gone on that this day commemorates an epoch in American history that shall never fade from the memories of men."

After the singing of "Lord God of Hosts, Be With Us Yet," by the quartet, the assemblage marched to Christ Church yard, where flowers were placed on the mound over the bodies of Confederate soldiers. A volley was fired by a squad from the Alexandria Light Infantry, benediction was said by the Rev. Dr. Regester and taps by a bugler from the Citizens Band closed the exercises.

John Meehan, secretary of the National Bus Association, which occupies a position similar to that of the American Automobile Association, except that it provides for the needs of bus owners rather than automobile owners, will be speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club today in the George Mason Hotel. Mr. Meehan comes to Alexandria as guest of Robert L. May, operator of the local bus line. Joseph Everly is acting as chairman of the entertainment committee and Everett Swan will have charge of singing.

A jury in the Corporation Court yesterday, after a short deliberation, announced that it was unable to agree in the case of John Ferris, colored, indicted for murder of William Johnson, colored. The jury was discharged by Judge William P. Woolls, presiding.

The shooting of Johnson occurred July 27, 1923, and the man died August 10, 1923. Ferris made his escape immediately after the shooting, and was captured in Philadelphia recently and returned here for trial. An indictment against Ferris was returned at the September term of the grand jury in 1923.

Final review of the cadet corps of the George Mason High School will be at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow on the school campus, in honor of C. H. Strader, principal of the school. The battalion will be under command of Capt. William Lee and the company under command of Capt. Roland Goode.

The work of laying concrete on Mount Vernon boulevard was started yesterday at the south end of Washington street, opposite St. Mary's Cemetery. The contractors are expected to push the work on Washington street vigorously.

The concrete will be laid in sections or strips 20 feet wide, and two weeks after the laying of one strip it will be opened to traffic. Unfavorable weather has interfered with the work.

The body of Samuel Dunlay Lindsay, 37 years old, who was accidentally drowned Saturday afternoon at a point on the Maryland side of the river near Fort Foote, was brought yesterday to Cunningham's funeral home, and will later be taken to Hot Springs, Va., for burial. Mr. Lindsay's home was in Fairfax County, between Gum Springs and Hunters Station. He was employed by the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., and is survived by his widow.

The Susan B. Anthony Foundation, Inc., will hold its annual meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Reba Barrett Smith, 408 Duke street.
